GRAVE AFFAIR AT MURET.

FRANCO-ITALIAN BATTLE.

PISTOLS USED.

Toulouse, Apr. 11.—The diplomatic wires between Italy and France are likely to be busy for a while following a most remarkable disturbance at Muret to-day, in which the Italian Vice-Consul at Toulouse was closely concerned.

The Vice-Consul had gone to Muret for the purpose of inaugurating a course of lectures in the Italian language for Italian children.

He was given an exceedingly hot reception, being greeted by catcalls and derisive whistles.

One of the demonstrators went so far as to shout: "You are representative of an assassin," whereupon the Italian Vice-Consul, really angry by this time, felled the speaker with his fist.

The blow was the signal for a most unseemly brawl was gradually developed into a very serious fracas in which there was a free exchange of sticks, bottles and revolvers.

FRIEND SHOT.

The Vice-Consul was hit upon the head and a member of his party was shot in the leg, whereupon the Vice-Consul drew a revolver and fired at his opponents, striking one in the jaw. Immediately afterwards the gendarmes appeared and put a stop to the fighting.

NORTH ATLANTIC RIVALRY.

SHIPPING LINES TO CONFER.

(Reuter's Special Service).

London, Apr. 11.—In view of the recent big reductions in passenger fares on the North Atlantic, representatives of British, American, French and German steamship organisations have arranged to confer in London shortly with the object of cutting out wasteful competition.

One proposal to be submitted to the conference is that each company shall lay up at least one of its large vessels, but that such liners as the Aquitania, the Majestic, the Bremen and the Ile de France shall not be put out of commission.

SILVER RISES A FARTHING.

NO EFFECT ON LOCAL DOLLAR.

Despite the fact that silver is up a farthing in London, the Hongkong dollar remains at yesterday's figure of 1s. 2 1/2d. The market locally is dull, with a slightly easier feeling apparent.

The London rise followed buying by China and the Continent. There were small offerings. After the official fixing, the market ruled idle, with buyers satisfied.

New York reports a rise of 1/8th, with the market steady.

VILLAGE ROAD MURDER CASE.

PUBLIC INTEREST DEMONSTRATED.

An extraordinary scene marked the proceedings before Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Central Magistracy this morning, when Cheng Kwok-yau, held in connexion with the murder of George Fung at Village Road, Happy Valley on March 24, made another brief appearance before the Magistrate.

Long before the case was due, a crowd of young and well-dressed Chinese men and women, streamed into the Court and overflowed into the corridor and outside passage. The pressure was later somewhat relieved by clearing the Court of people obstructing the gangways.

AIR ROUTE TO AMERICA.

London, Apr. 11.

An Arctic Expedition, organised with the object of discovering the shortest air route from Europe to America, via Franz Josef Land and the North Pole, is to be undertaken by Professor Samoilovitch, the famous Russian explorer.

He is planning to use the Soviet ice-breaker Krassin for the expedition, while he will also be taking aeroplanes.

Professor Samoilovitch expressed the hope that 1933 will see the arrival in Alaska of the first Russian airship built on General Noble's system.

It will be recalled that it was Professor Samoilovitch who effected the dramatic rescue of the crew of the ill-fated Italian airship "Italia." He used the Krassin for the rescue work.—Reuter.

COLLAPSE OF N. Y. STOCKS.

ANOTHER HOOVER INQUIRY.

New York, Apr. 11.—In view of the concern with which the Administration regards the persistent fall in security prices, President Hoover has undertaken to arrange a conference of Congressional and business leaders to devise a means of improving economic conditions in the United States.

Cold water was poured upon the reports of the bear raid yesterday by Mr. Whitney, the President of the New York Stock Exchange, who told a Committee of Enquiry that bear raiding had not influenced the market.

He declared that the recent fall in stock prices was due to bona fide liquidation.—Reuter.

Prince Nicholas of Rumania and his wife, Mme. Savescu Dumitrescu, in Paris. The Prince has been ordered to dissolve this morganatic marriage or renounce his rights.

Shock of Double Crossing.

New York, Apr. 11.

It is reported that Mrs. Lindbergh has collapsed under the cruel disappointment of the failure of the kidnappers to return her baby after the ransom had been paid.

Mrs. Lindbergh's hopes had been buoyed up to a pitch of high excitement by the fact that her husband was personally in contact with the gang responsible for the dastardly outrage and was confident of success.

The double-crossing was more than she could bear.

Both the police and Colonel Lindbergh are at their wits' end to know what to do next, though important results may possibly develop from a sensational incident at Greenwich, Connecticut, to-day, when a twenty-dollar note bearing the serial number of one of the notes paid by Colonel Lindbergh to the kidnappers was presented at a Greenwich bakery store by a woman.

When she discovered that the note had been identified she grabbed it from the counter and fled. The police are now engaged in an intensive search, but have failed to trace her hitherto.—Reuter.

FAMOUS WHEAT COUP RECALLED.

DEATH OF MR. JOSEPH LEITER.

Chicago, Apr. 11.—Mr. Joseph Leiter, the millionaire brother-in-law of the late Marquis Carzon of Keddleston, died to-day of pneumonia. He was 63 years of age.

It will be recalled that in the autumn of 1897, he bought wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade to such an extent as to make him, at the beginning of 1898, the largest individual holder of wheat in the history of the grain trade.

He was President of the Ziegler Coal Company and a director of the American Security and Trust Company of Washington, D. C.—Reuter.

DISARMAMENT PLEAS.

RESUMPTION OF THE CONFERENCE

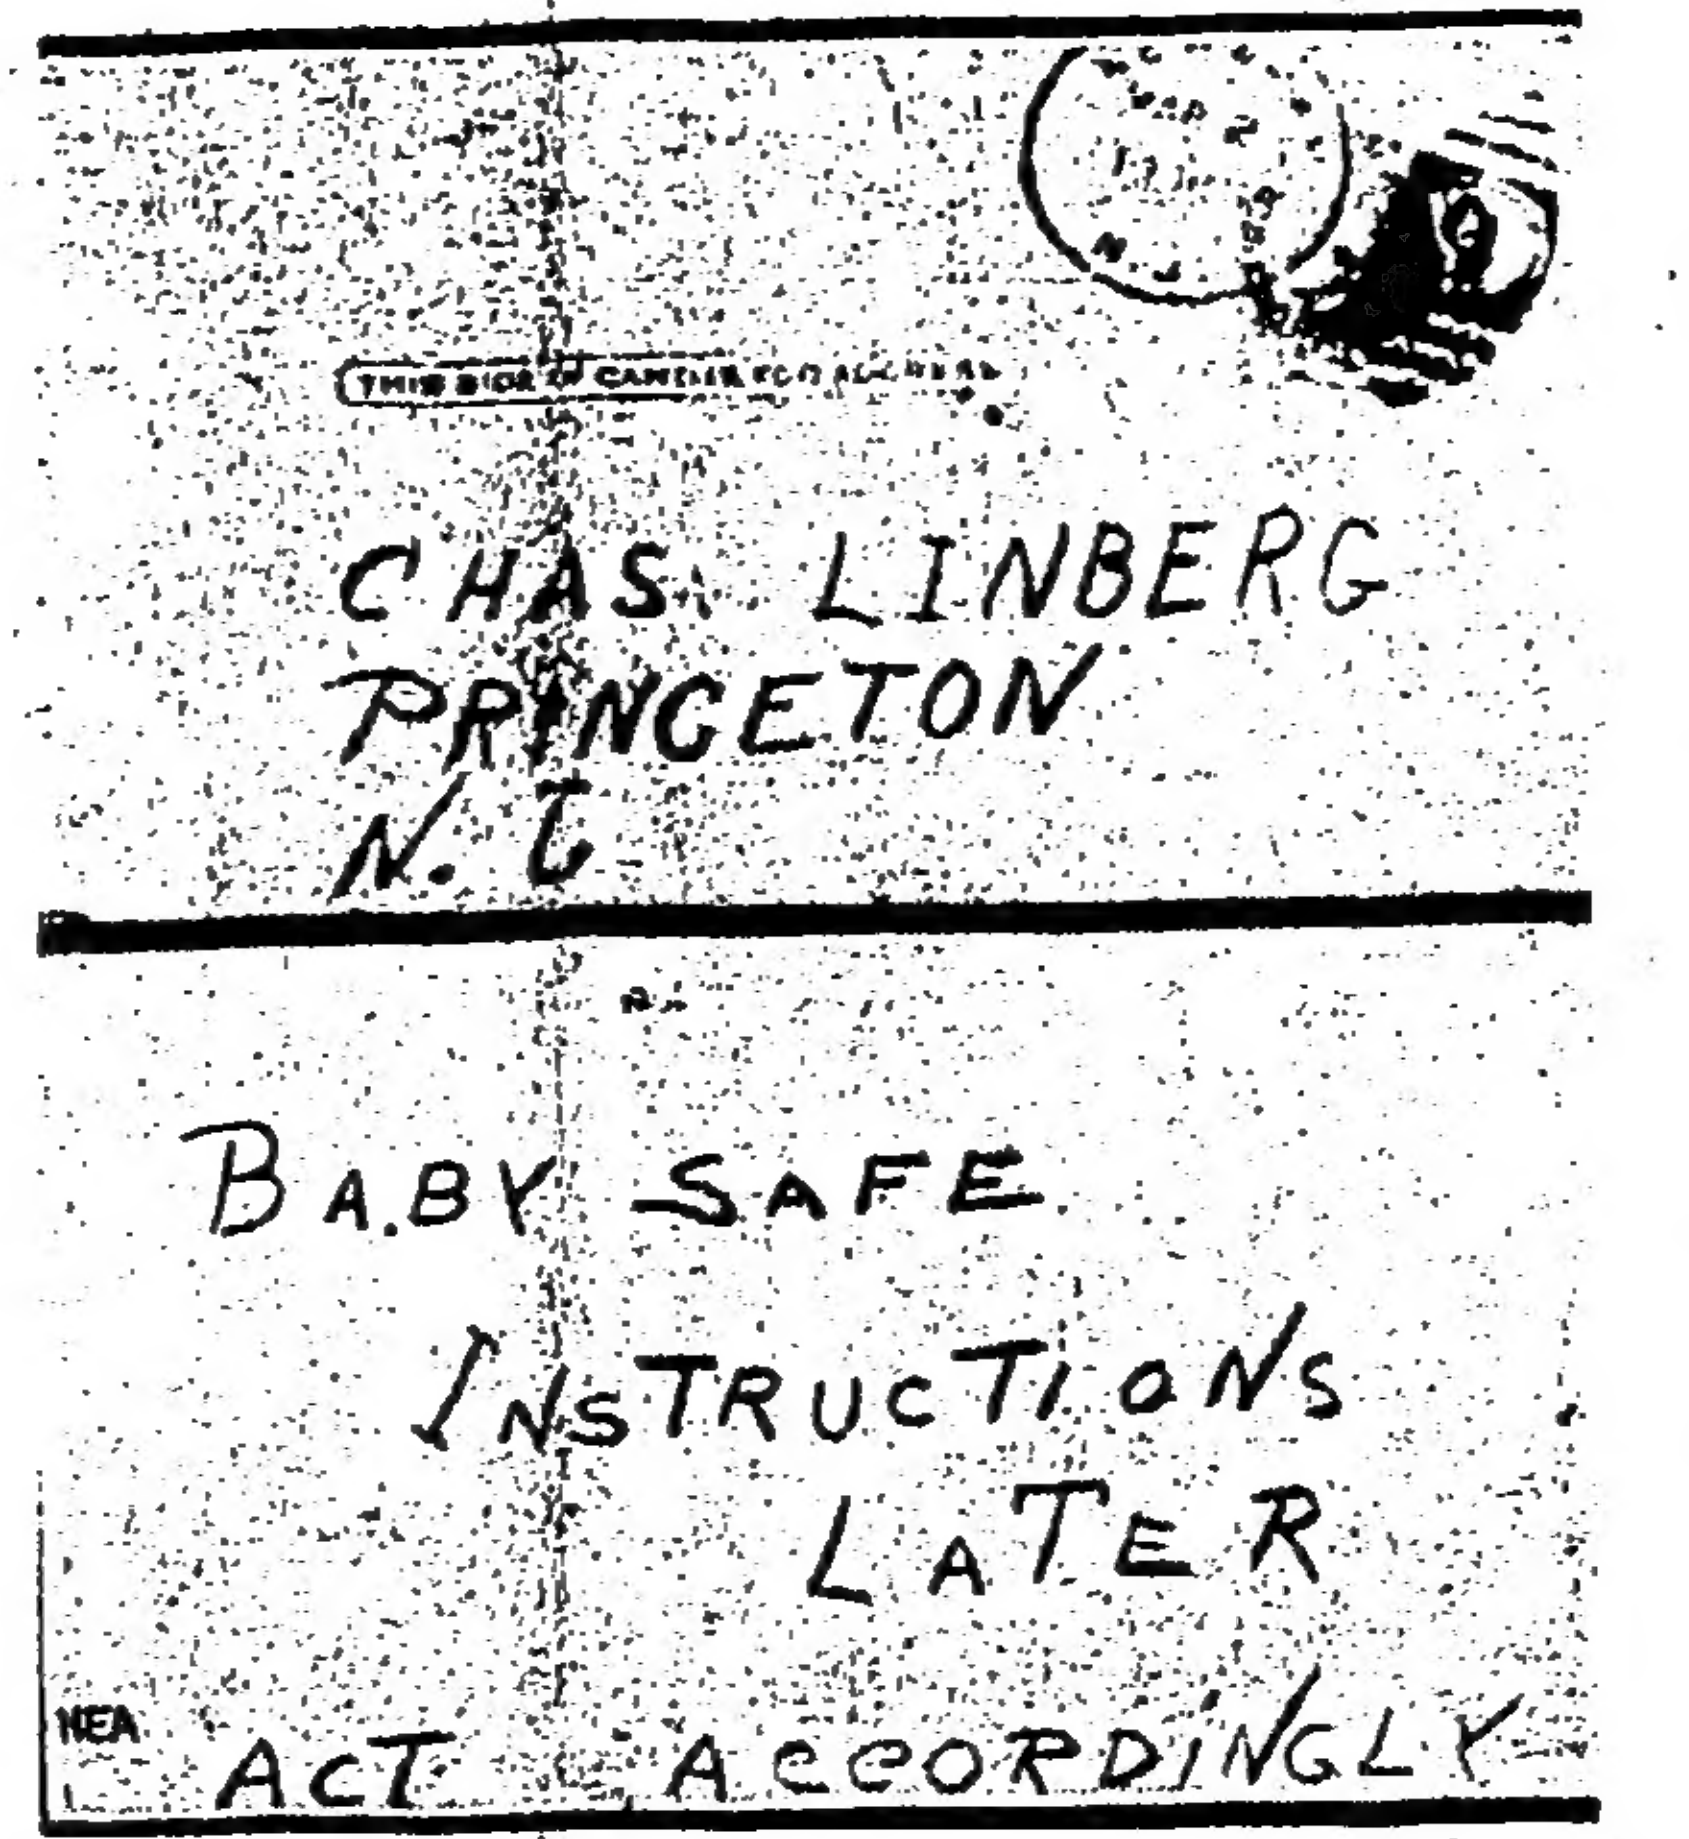

Geneva, Apr. 11.

At the meeting to-day of the Disarmament Conference, Mr. Hugh Gibson (United States) intimated that he would be prepared later to advocate the abolition of bombing planes.

Sir John Simon warmly supported the American proposal.

Dr. Nadolny (Germany) urged a reduction of armaments to the lowest limit compatible with national security.

M. Tardieu sympathised with Mr. Gibson's ideas, but said he considered that the French proposals went further than Mr. Gibson's which applied solely to land weapons and was therefore contrary to the French argument regarding the interdependence of armaments.—Reuter.

BRITAIN'S NOTE TO FREE STATE.

ALL CORRESPONDENCE NOW PUBLISHED.

London, Apr. 11.

The Anglo-Irish Notes relating to the Parliamentary Oath of Allegiance in the Irish Free State and to the land purchase annuities which have recently been exchanged between Mr. de Valera, of the Free State Government, and Mr. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions in the Government of the United Kingdom, were published in a White Paper to-day.

The British Note says that the issue raised by de Valera is nothing less than the repudiation of the 1921 Treaty as a whole.

ATTACK ON TREATY AS A WHOLE.

The controversy arises through the contention of the Free State Government that the Oath is not mandatory in the Anglo-Irish Treaty of 1921 and that the Free State has an absolute right to modify its Constitution in this respect, coupled with an announcement that the Free State Government claim the right, which they propose to exercise, to retain the land annuities accruing under the Irish Land Acts of 1891 to 1909.

In opposition to these, the Government of the United Kingdom maintain that the Oath is an integral part of the Treaty made ten years ago between the two countries, and hitherto honourably observed on both sides, and that the Irish Free State Government are bound by the most formal and explicit undertaking to continue to pay the land annuities—payments which tenants of purchased estates make in repayment of sums lent to them to buy their land.

Mr. de Valera, in a letter dated 6th April, expresses the view that whether the Oath is or is not an integral part of the Treaty made ten years ago is not now the issue. The real issue is that the Oath is now an intolerable burden and that the people of the Irish Free State desire its instant removal.

The agreements of 1921, he says, gave effect to what was the will of the British Government. Britain's world prestige had been enhanced by the belief that Ireland had been set free and her national aspirations fully satisfied, whereas it had meant for Ireland a "consummation of the outrage of partition."

Examination of the Oath and removal of the articles of the Constitution necessary for that purpose, he describes as of purely domestic concern, required for the peace order and good government of State.

Proposed Legislation.

The competence of the Irish Free State Legislature to pass such a measure is, he maintains, not open to question, and his Government, immediately on the re-assembly of Parliament, will introduce a Bill to this effect.

Regarding the land annuities, Mr. de Valera declares himself unaware of any formal undertaking to continue this payment, but gives an assurance that his Government will scrupulously honour any just and lawful claims by Great Britain or any other creditors. His Note concludes with an expression of desire for friendly relations between Britain and the Irish Free State, based on mutual respect and common interest.

Britain's "Deep Regret"

In a reply dated Saturday, the Dominions Secretary, Mr. J. H. Thomas said the Government had read the terms of Mr. de Valera's despatch with deep regret.

The views expressed therein, says the reply, go far beyond the issues originally raised and make it clear that the questions of the Oath and the land annuities are but part of a wider issue, and that what is raised is nothing less than the repudiation of the settlement of 1921 as a whole.

His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom entered into the 1921 settlement with a single desire that it should end the long period of bitterness between the two countries, and it is their belief that that settlement has

HITLER DISGRUNTLED.

THE ELECTION "A FARCE."

Munich, Apr. 11.

Hilter is a much disappointed man as the result of his failure in the election.

The election was a farce. If it had been run on democratic lines, the result would undoubtedly have been different, he told Reuter's representative this evening, declaring that the British people had no idea of the quantity and the variety of the unfair tactics employed against him.

Both the Government and supporters of President Hindenburg had stooped to every conceivable method in their efforts to muzzle the Nazi campaign, including denying them the use of wireless muzzling the press, and forbidding political meetings in which the Nazis were interested on the most frivolous excuses.

Law And Order.

He alleged that on one occasion his speech was banned merely because it criticised the Government. Hilter emphatically denied the suggestion that the Nazis intended to organise anti-Semitic persecution, declaring that Fascism stood for law and order not for anarchy.—Reuter.

TINGUIRIRICA ACTIVE.

RAINING ASHES ON CITIES.

DISTURBANCES IN S. AMERICA.

Santiago, Apr. 11.

Volcanic eruptions and earthquake disturbances on an enormous scale are causing alarm and much damage throughout Chile and the Argentine.

The visitation is the worst in living memory. An area of roughly four hundred miles by seven hundred miles is affected.

The giant volcano Tinguiririca and several minor peaks are pouring increasingly a shower of ashes upon the surrounding countryside. The fall in some places is constant like a snowfall and here and there the ashes have already reached a depth of three feet!

Trains Held Up.

The darkness caused by the clouds of smoke and the ash-rain is seriously hampering business in the affected towns, while many trains have been held up by obstructions on the line caused by the emissions of the volcanoes.

This is particularly bad to the west of Buenos Aires, while at Montevideo, the ash shower has continued without the slightest interruption for ten hours.

FLOOD RELIEF IN CHINA.

GREAT WORK UNDER DIFFICULTY.

London, April 11.

The heroism of the Chinese crews of the launches engaged in delivering grain to the flooded areas along the Yangtze, often under the fire of bands of brigands and Communists, is mentioned in a cable received by the Emergency Appeal Committee from Sir John Hope Simpson, who is directing the flood relief organisation.

Sir John reports that the Dean of Canterbury, who has visited the devastated zones, was deeply impressed by the technical grip of the situation shown by the Chinese engineers in charge of the repair work on the dykes in the Hankow area.

Much of this district is infested by bandits and Communist armies.—Reuter.

THE ANTI-PIRACY GUARDS.

SHIP-OWNERS TO PAY.

B. & S. APPEAL

London, Apr. 11.

The Court of Appeal to-day upheld the judgment of Mr. Justice Rowlett in the King's Bench Division dismissing the action of the China Navigation Company against the Attorney-General concerning the British Government's right to demand payment for the provision of anti-piracy guards to British ships in Chinese waters.

The China Navigation Company contended that the expense of guarding British ships with naval and military forces was covered by House of Commons Votes, to which they contributed as taxpayers.

The Crown was not empowered to claim payment. The Court of Appeal found otherwise.—Reuter.

MACHINE-GUNS FOR FAR EAST.

Berne, Apr. 12.

That the Federal Arms Factory at Berne has accepted a contract for the supply to an Eastern Power of four hundred heavy machine-guns, was revealed yesterday when the Federal Council discussed Swiss armaments manufactures for foreign Powers.

It was pointed out that the Council was not empowered to prohibit the private manufacture of armaments.—Reuter.

CHINA NATIONAL ASSEMBLY.

Loyang, Apr. 12.

The National Government scored an important victory yesterday when, after a lengthy and heated debate, the National Emergency Council rejected resolutions advocating the reorganisation of the Government and the Kuomintang.

The Conference finally decided to support the present government and to prepare for the convocation of a National Assembly to supervise the Government.—Reuter.

The Hague, Apr. 12.

Scheurleer and Sons, one of the oldest private banking houses in Holland has suspended payments, requesting a moratorium.

The deposits are declared to be safe. The news has created consternation throughout the country owing to the firm's widespread connexions.—Reuter.

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

By W. E. McKenney.

Secretary, American Bridge
League.

The forcing system is without a doubt the most popular bidding system used by contract bridge players today. This system cannot be credited to any one particular authority as the expert players throughout the country have all contributed something to its development. There are perhaps more books written on the forcing system than on all other systems combined. Each authority has his particular variation which he feels comes closer to producing satisfactory results in particular situations.

Every authority today uses some kind of a forcing or demand bid. A forcing or demand bid is a declaration made which signifies certain high card holding and absolutely requires partner to keep the bidding open in case the left hand opponent of the forcing bidder passes. Our next few articles will explain the straight forcing system with all of its popular variations including those of the writer.

It is not necessary that a player understand auction before he takes up contract. As a matter of fact it is more difficult for one who has just a fair knowledge of auction to change over to contract, as they will constantly use auction tactics which will not produce satisfactory results due to the exactness required in contract bidding.

The first thing the beginner at contract must learn is to value his hand in two ways:

Defensively—the number of tricks it will take if opponents play the hand.

Offensively—the probable number of tricks it will take when played at your own or partner's best suit, e.g. You hold:

Spades—7-4
Hearts—K-Q-J-10-9-8-4
Diamonds—6-2
Clubs—7-3

Offensively this hand will take six tricks if played at hearts, but defensively—let us say against a club declaration by opponents—it is doubtful if it will even take a trick. The ace of hearts will naturally kill off the king of hearts and in all probability your queen of hearts will be trumped.

While if you held the following:

Spades—A-K-5-2
Hearts—A-K-2
Diamonds—A-8-3
Clubs—J-7-4

Offensively you can count the ace and king of spades for two tricks, the fourth spade if played at spades as one probable trick, and the ace and king of hearts and the ace of diamonds, giving you six probable tricks if played at spade. Defensively you hold five quick tricks.

While the first hand contains six probable tricks if played at hearts, it has no defensive value and therefore does not have the requirements for an original bid. The second hand has the same number of probable tricks, but it also contains five defensive tricks—enough high card tricks to make a forcing two bid, but not quite enough probable tricks—but is an unusually strong opening bid.

THE ONLY WAY TO END INDIGESTION.

REMOVE THE CAUSE AND YOU REMOVE THE PAIN.

Nine-tenths of digestive troubles are caused by food fermentation and excess acid in the stomach, and it is only by ending these conditions that permanent relief can be hoped for. The quickest, safest, and surest way to do this is to take a little 'Bismarck' Magnesia in water after eating or whenever pain is felt. This not only stops fermentation and neutralises excess acid, but exerts a soothing healing and strengthening influence on the weakened stomach, and induces normal healthy digestion. That is why doctors and nurses everywhere recommend 'Bismarck' Magnesia. Follow their sound advice and get a package of 'Bismarck' Magnesia powder or tablets from your store or bazaar dealer at once, and ensure stomach health, with the fear of dyspepsia banished for ever.

THE LATE MR. M. MANUK.

THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY TRIBUTES.

SOLEMN MEETING.

A meeting in memory of the late Mr. Malcolm Manuk, the founder and mainstay of the local Theosophical movement, was held at the lodge of the Society at Queen's Road Central last evening.

On a table on the rostrum where the late President often was to be seen, conducting the weekly meetings of the Society, was a solitary lighted taper and incense rising from a brazier. In the chair which he was wont to occupy, was a basket of his favourite flowers, while other flowers were disposed about or were strewn on the platform.

A silence fell on the gathering as the first speaker rose to address the meeting.

Mr. John Russell, speaking from the rostrum, asked them not to regard the occasion as a memorial service—to dissociate the idea completely from their minds, and to enter upon the proceedings in the spirit of a service of appreciation, because their founder and leader could never be a memory. He must and always would be a living force to all those who had the privilege of coming into contact with him.

They were gathered there that night to appreciate the wonderful work and the great influence which their late teacher had given to all those interested in the Theosophical movement in China, particularly in Hongkong, where the movement was initiated ten years ago by him and a few other brothers.

Mr. Russell then spoke eloquently of the late Mr. Manuk's life, his work, and his inspiration. To others.

Mrs. Talati's Tribute.

Mrs. Talati said: I have to say a few words with a very heavy heart. My husband and myself are among those who had the advantage of listening to the late brother Manuk's inspiring teachings since the beginning of this Lodge, so we feel ourselves most indebted to him.

His passing away, so unexpectedly, has been certainly a great shock and a very heavy loss to all of us; but just as his life has taught us useful lessons, his passing away so suddenly has also taught us useful lessons, that is to understand the uncertainty of physical existence and not to leave for to-morrow what we can do today; and to do our duty towards each other as promptly as possible, just like he did, and keep prepared to submit to the Creator's will.

Brother Manuk realized the unity, eternity and omnipresence of the spirit of Life and always tried to impress these ideals upon our minds; so let us believe that his spirit is surely here at present knowing and seeing all, helping all to be calm and peaceful and strong, and inspiring all to continue the work which he has entrusted to us and which he loved best.

The dime-a-dance girl

BY JOAN CLAYTON

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY.

Beautiful Ellen Rosseter, who works by day as a waitress in Barclay's Department Store, lives with her mother, Molly Rosseter, her older sister, Myra, and her fifteen-year-old brother, Mike. Irresponsible Molly has long since spent the fortune left by her English husband and the two girls support the family. Molly foolishly spends money saved to pay the rent. Ellen decides to work at night as a dance hall waitress until the sum is made up. She goes to Dreamland and interviews Jacob Salomon who offers her a job on condition that she supply her own evening dress. She has no evening dress.

Back at the store again, Ellen begins to cry in her bitter disappointment. Steven Barclay, owner of the store, sees her and asks her to come to his office. When she tells him of her problem he offers to give her a dress but she refuses to accept it. He then offers to lend her one of the dresses worn by the models. She borrows a lovely white tulle dress.

Ellen is half-pleased, half-frightened by Barclay's obvious interest in her.

CHAPTER IV.

When Ellen accepted Steven Barclay's offer to drive her to Dreamland she did so with the same naturalness he had shown in extending the invitation. Their friendship had made such strides that her only hesitancy sprang from the vague fears which had troubled her in his office, fears that his name would be linked with hers by gossiping, fellow-workers.

But Barclay himself had no such fears. He moved in a different world than his employees. He would have been amazed had he dreamed of the complicated feelings of many of them, of their bitter narrowness, of their jealousy and envy of those more fortunate. He was too naturally modest to imagine that his comings and goings, however trivial, were of absorbing interest to scores of men and women who had never met him. Nor did it occur to him that he might be subjecting a girl to the breath of scandal.

But as Ellen sank back into the soft depths of dove-grey cushions and turned her rosy face to him he felt a pang as of anticipated pain. And he believed then that he had been unwise.

same light restlessness that he thought had left him years ago. And that was impossible. He was 57. Ellen was young enough to be his daughter. Almost roughly he leaned forward and gave the driver directions for reaching Dreamland. When he offered Ellen a cigarette and pulled out the lighter for her no one would have guessed that he imagined he had, in the brief space of seconds, put away from him a small, vague dream.

"I don't smoke," Ellen told him. His brows went up quizzically. "I thought all young girls smoked nowadays." At his look of surprise she explained. "You see the people we live among and, for that matter, my family, too, are so poor that we must be respectable. On any debatable point—like smoking for women—we're all ultra-conservative. Not," she added still in that light strain, "that I lie awake nights longing to smoke. I don't like it really. If I did I'd smoke."

"I'm sure you would. But I'm rather glad you don't. I can't get used to it."

He broke off abruptly and thought that there was no use appearing in her eyes as an old fogey even if he were old enough to be her father. With Ellen's permission they drove through Central Park before going to the dance-hall. Central Park in the languid twilight was relaxed and quiet after the fierce heat of the day.

On the bridge paths there were a few horseback riders, their habits crumpled, their horses at an apathetic trot. But neither the horses nor the riders appeared to be enjoying themselves.

plied. The last toy boat capsized on the lake. The last cross and sleepy child was dragged away to supper.

The park grew quiet. The limousine wished to a stop at the Casino where early diners, men and women, in evening clothes, leaned across softly lighted tables talking and laughing. Ellen and her escort went inside for food and drinks. Neither of them was hungry.

Ellen looked around with wide-eyed pleasure at the other diners, successful men and lovely, well-dressed women. As her eyes returned to the handsome man opposite her she began to feel a singing in her heart.

What fun to be so rich! What fun to be driven in a limousine wherever you wanted to go! What fun to stop at a smart restaurant because you were thirsty, to be served by an impressed headwaiter, to have every wish anticipated. Care and worries drifted away from her. The hurried, clattery morning with its clashing of milk cans and jangling alarm clocks seemed years away. Here there was only peace and beauty and leisure.

She began, did Ellen, to weave those swift dreams of girlhood, those dreams that need so little substance. Although Steven Barclay did not guess it his own shadowy figure moved through those fantasies.

They drove almost quietly to Dreamland, absorbed in their separate thoughts. They stopped off Broadway. Ellen carefully picked up the box which held the precious dress and stretched out her hand to Barclay.

"I can't tell you," she said breathlessly, "how much I appreciate what you've done for me."

Above them, through the open windows, came a clashing of brasses and a singing of strings. The orchestra at Dreamland was tuning up.

"I'm glad I could do it," Barclay replied.

He meant to stop there. But he heard himself saying what he had not intended to say.

"I would like to do a great deal more for you."

agine that the fact Steven Barclay had lent her a dress meant anything except that he was a kind and generous man.

What did she know of him after all? He was rich and she had idly dreamed of becoming his young and adored wife, dreamed of the beauty that as Mrs. Steven Barclay she could bring into the lives of Myra and Molly and baby Mike. Dreamed, too, of herself in thin, gay frocks, never chosen for utility, moving in the pleasure spots of the world with never a thought of work or care.

She stepped into Dreamland and ran straight into Jacob Salomon. His face broke into a wide grin. "Hullo—you're back. And with the dress, too, I see. Quick work, kid."

Ellen's chin came up. "I might as well tell you," she said coolly, "that I intend to work here only temporarily. For three weeks at the most."

"That's o.k. by me, kid. But since you're here I suppose you won't mind obeying the rules like the other girls. Or will you?"

"I won't," Ellen replied, ignoring his heavy-handed sarcasm. "Guess this is the only one I didn't tell you about."

He pointed to a sign on the bright pink plaster wall. Ellen read that the hostesses were permitted no conversation while dancing except "yes" or "no" in answer to questions. She turned her amazed face to Salomon.

"Oh," said Ellen blankly. "Our specialty's chop suey." Price continued imperceptibly. "Price $1—75 cents to me, 25 cents to the hostess. Thirty-five if the chop suey isn't eaten but that means you can't mess in it with your fork. It has to be good enough to serve again."

Ellen giggled. "The joint's straight," he assured her seriously. "We don't serve liquor. We don't even admit men that have been drinking—much."

She was a little perturbed by his cheerful outspokenness but she meekly allowed him to pilot her to a cramped dressing room and to introduce her haphazardly to the other girls, some 15 in number. He used no last names. The

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST KILLING METHODS.

A correspondent signing himself "Humanity" sends us a pamphlet distributed with Overalls in which a world-wide appeal is made against the horrors of trapping fur-bearing animals. The pamphlet is by Major Charles Van der Byl.

The author points out that from eight to 10 beavers are killed for one coat and about 80 mink skins make one wrap, and adds that practically all animals with paws undergo tortures in the steel traps and that if women knew these things they would never buy another trapped fur.

girls were Alice and Dolly and Sunny and Anne and Marge to him. Ellen assumed they were to be that to her.

Salomon had not knocked but nobody appeared surprised. A few of the girls reached for kimonos but most of them serenely continued their toilette. One hard little youngster, whom Salomon called Tony, deliberately pulled her one-piece dress over her head and stood in brief shorts and a soiled satin uplift, grinning at them.

A brightly painted screen, gaudy with peacocks and pagodas, concealed a washstand in one corner of the small, hot room. Ellen went behind it to dress. The quarters were cramped and stifling but she did not mean to risk another of Salomon's unconventional entries.

When she emerged only two hostesses were left in the room—Tony and a languishing blonde called Anise. They shared a wicker bench, where they had sat smoking and waiting to have a first-hand look at the new hostess.

Ellen looked toward Tony—and met a pair of coolly hostile eyes. (To be Continued.)

THE TROUBLES OF PRINCE
NICHOLAS.

Bucharest, Apr. 11.
The troubles of Prince Nicholas of Rumania have not yet ended, for King Carol is still resolutely refusing to recognise his brother's marriage to Madame Saveanu.

ed by air from Budapest unaccompanied by Madame Saveanu, who is remaining at Paris.
A Throne Council has been convened and Prince Nicholas is reported to have been given three days in which to divorce his wife or renounce all his rights.
Prince Nicholas has arrived here apparently in order to interview the King personally.—Reuter's

WOMEN'S WORLD

FOR OUR LADY READERS.

"REVOLUTIONARY" STYLES
IN NEW ACCESSORIES.

Accessories adroitly pay homage to the Washington bi-centennial this spring by reflecting a Colonial inspiration. Steel buckles appear as one of the smartest trimmings for pumps, and belts

of leather.
A chic bag and belt of patent leather have a modern version of a simple Colonial steel buckle; a classic opera pump uses a cut steel buckle with a coloured backing to match the frock with which it is worn; a tongue pump, with a distinct Colonial flavour, heightens its period design of using a square cut steel buckle for decoration.

TO-DAY'S RECIPES.

After-Dinner Sweets.

These days, while no one has money to spend unnecessarily, the housewife may feel that she ought to forego that luxury, the after-dinner sweet. But as a matter of fact this need not be an extravagance, for the following recipes show how some delicious bon-bons may be made at quite inconsiderable expense.

After-Dinner Mints.

Dissolve 1 oz. instant powdered gelatine and 1 lb. loaf sugar, in a breakfastcupful boiling water and boil for two minutes. Add enough green colouring to make the sweets a pleasing shade and stir in a teaspoonful essence of peppermint, or more if a strong flavour is desired.
Rinse some flat tins with cold water, pour in the mixture to a depth of about 1 inch, and leave till cold and set. Cut into cubes with a sharp knife which must be constantly dipped in boiling water, and roll the cubes in finely-sifted icing sugar.

Salted Almonds.

Blanch 4 ozs. almonds (by soaking in boiling water and then removing the skins), and dry them.
Into a small aluminium pan put as much butter as will be about an inch deep when melted, and when a blue smoke rises from this put in the almonds all at once and fry till nicely browned. Have ready mixed on a white paper some salt and a little cayenne, and toss the almonds in this till they are nearly cold.

Marzipan Slices.

Boil 1 lb. loaf sugar in 1 1/2 tencups water for 10 minutes. Draw the pan to the side of the stove, and when slightly cooled add 12 ozs.
ground almonds and the unbeaten whites of 2 eggs. Stir by the side of the fire for a few minutes, turn out on a slab or board, stir in 3 ozs.
sifted icing sugar, and work the paste with a wooden spoon till cool enough to handle. Knead till quite smooth, divide into three portions, and colour these brown, red, and green. Flavour the brown with coffee, the red with rose or raspberry, and the green with vanilla.
Roll the pieces out to a uniform shape, about 1/4 inch thick. Brush the brown piece over with water, lay the green over it, brush the green with water, and lay the red on it.
Press with the rolling pin to make the different pieces stick together, then brush the surface of the red with water and cover with wafer paper. Press with the rolling pin again, turn the marzipan over, wet the surface of the brown paste, cover with wafer paper, and press with the rolling pin again till the paper adheres. Leave to set and dry, then cut into thin slices and shape these as you like.

SIMPLIFIED WIRELESS.

The newest wireless sets solve the problem of discovering the whereabouts of the most obscure foreign stations obtainable on the sets.
Just above the tuning-in dials is placed a small map of Europe, with the names of the various wireless

FASHION NOTES.

Paris Millinery.

Many of the Paris hats this season are really charmingly pretty and easy to wear, and others,
I am sorry to say, are even more monstrously ugly than the hats we have been wearing for the last four or five months.

The Spring hats are, of course, small and close-fitting. Although they are cut to expose all the forehead, and even a little hair above it, the majority are provided with a kind of brim.

The hat, which is on the crest of the wave at the moment is the round little cap, which just covers the back of the head, and has a padded halo-like trimming. Closefitting little shapes worn well on the side of the head, showing hair that is immaculately waved and dressed are noticeable for town-wear.

Some of these little caps have a gross-grain ribbon attached to them at the back, but unattached in front, with several inches of hair showing between the ribbon and the hats themselves. Delightful little hats, or rather caps, modern interpretations of the old Persian head-wear are being worn with many of the new costumes.

stations printed upon it. When a certain station is obtained a tiny coloured light in the position of the station is easily perceived.

EASY MONEY.

There is, we suppose, no part of the world in which the obsession to make riches quickly by means of share speculation does not periodically manifest itself. We have seen the process operating in England, the United States and many other countries, whilst even here in Hongkong we are by no means unacquainted with this feature of life. And although it is the case that big sums of money are made in this way, it is unfortunately also true that big sums are lost by people who think that easy profits are to be secured by speculative operations in stock and shares. There will, of course, always be this kind of speculation, just as there is speculation in exchange and in commodities. Human nature being what it is, this is inevitable. The trouble usually arises when "small people" with nothing at their backs, enter the market in a frame of mind which visualises only the profits and takes no account of the possibility of the market going against them. It is in periods of severe liquidation, from which no market is immune, that those who are hit are often those least able to stand the loss.

It is when we contrast the monied speculator with the man who has nothing but hope that we see how much better a chance the former has than the latter when markets begin to fall. The little operator usually works on a small margin, or no margin at all, and consequently at the first appreciable break of prices he either has to put additional funds into his brokerage account in order to maintain the stipulated margin, or else is sold out at a loss. Little wonder that when stocks slump heavily, these "small fry" should find that their accounts have been liquidated, with resulting large losses to them. Large traders, on the other hand, make a study of the market and the factors which are likely to influence it, just as the ordinary business man studies his business. In some instances, it is true, the study appears rather superficial and insignificant, but nevertheless it serves a distinct purpose and gives these individuals a great advantage over the outsider. And of equal importance is the fact that the big operators frequently have "inside" information upon which they are able to act to their advantage. The net result is that in the majority of cases the professional speculator is either "out of the market" when a major reaction comes, or else has so reduced his holdings of securities that he has little fear of calls being made upon him for additional margin. In other words, the professional speculator is able to ride out the liquidation, and probably buy additional stocks when they are low, while the small men go into the liquidation in an overloaded condition and sooner or later flounder and sink.

It is not to be supposed, however, that even the experts can always foretell a reaction in the market. Very far from it. The most expensive share market economic service in the world would not assure one against being caught from time to time. Otherwise the element of risk would be eliminated from one of the most complicated and sensitive business activities in the world. It is obvious, nevertheless, that the opinions of experts are valuable, even though they are wrong every now and then, and it is just as foolhardy to ignore the constituents of the stock market and still expect to make money as it would be to begin the manufacture of motor cars without knowing anything about physics and mechanics. Until this truth is more widely recognized we shall continue to hear periodically of the savings of thousands of individuals being lost because they think they can "beat the market."

Novels, Short and Cheap.

Many attempts have been made to entice the British public into buying cheap novels, but experience does not show so far that the public wants them. It apparently would rather pay the price and keep the book as a solid, respectable piece of interior decoration; or go to a library and borrow a book for next to nothing. The paper cover of the very cheap book has something to do with this attitude. They may order these things better in France, but the English public, with its native respect for appearances, finds it hard to believe that a book in a paper cover is worth reading or buying. A few shelves of these dog-eared volumes would be declared untidy. These are some of the prejudices against which yet another British publisher has gone to war, and his boldness has come to unusual and original lengths. Three new short novels—they are about half the ordinary length—by such reputable writers as Miss Naomi Royde-Smith and Messrs. J. D. Boreford and Eden Phillips are among the recent batch this publisher is issuing at ninepence. They are original, hitherto unpublished works. They are pocket size, bound in fairly stiff paper covers, and the intention is to reverse the usual process of publication by beginning with this cheap edition and progressing to dearer cloth-bound ones as occasion—chiefly in the form of the libraries—demands. It is too soon to know what success this venture will have against English prejudice, and it is not easy to see what advantage there is in the scheme for either the established or the new author. But it is only from the author's point of view that the prospects can be discussed with any safety at the moment. It is he who will largely determine the success of the venture. On the present basis of the seven-and-sixpenny novel in England the author is not obliged to have the spectacular success which will be required by the ninepenny book (with its penny royalty) for the same financial return. He knows that his dear books will go on selling as they get cheaper, but he will find it hard to believe that his cheap books will go on selling as they get dearer. He may take the view that to issue a short novel in this series is equivalent to selling it outright to a magazine—which might conceivably pay him much more—and one wonders if this is the surest way of getting his best work. In England one commits the wild act of buying a book as an act of faith. You may know our faith by our books, but you can never know it by our borrowed books—that is, broadly speaking, the English attitude. There is indeed, as things stand in English literature at the moment, a great deal to be said for dearer, fewer and better books.

The death took place at the Government Civil Hospital on Sunday of Mr. Jhamatal D. Mahani, a member of the Sindhi Community. The deceased had been residing in Hongkong together with his family and leaves a son and a daughter. The funeral took place yesterday, the local Indian shops closing as a mark of respect.

CARD-GAMES AS SCHOOL SUBJECTS.

By "SLAM"

AN intellectual card game might advantageously be included as part of the curriculum at our schools, both for boys and for girls. American writers to-day are strongly advocating the same thing. Some form of bridge would be above all other card games, the one best suited for scholastic purposes.

The best opportunity for starting our young people at a card game would be upon their leaving their preparatory schools for more advanced ones. This change takes place at the age of thirteen or fourteen. Children's minds are at that time most receptive to the teaching of any fresh subject in which they can be interested.

Application to the study and practice of some such card game as bridge would serve in a marked degree to stimulate the powers of observation and deduction in schoolchildren. Both in observation and deduction, the mind has to act very quickly at the card table. Decisions must be made promptly, and promptly acted upon.

Again, apart from the mental training derived from the actual playing of the cards, the minds of the players are kept well on the alert in looking after the score and accounting it quickly and correctly. This should help to improve the arithmetical of our young people, many of whom are decidedly deficient in this direction, and often in after-life develop into very bad "adders," which may seriously handicap them.

Then, again, such a partnership game as bridge should serve as character-forming and character-reading training for our young people. As with their elders, there would be those among them who would lose with a good grace and without grumbling, and those who would do just the reverse. Again, like their elders, there would be among the juveniles generous players, always prepared to condone mistakes, and caring ones over ready to cavil at their partners.
"Always blame, blame, blame—but never a word of praise!" seemingly being their slogan.

With these examples before them young people under proper supervision should learn to appreciate courtesy and consideration for others, and to practise both.

Again, for those who are likely to have opportunities of playing bridge when they go out into the world a preliminary course of the game at school should prove most advantageous.

A fact which should be borne in mind, too, when bringing up our young people is that bridge to-day is a great social asset. I do not, however, mean to convey the idea that I consider card playing should be indulged in to excess and at the expense of more useful or more artistic occupations; nothing of the sort.

Bridge provides opportunities for the association of our young people, upon very genial terms, not only with those of their own age, but with their elders, among whom they may find someone who is in a position to help them to a career, or to their advancement in a career if a selection has already been made.

At the card table the older people have excellent opportunities of judging of the capabilities and characters of the younger ones.

For the young ladies bridge has its romantic side. You never know, some bridge partnership may develop into a life-long one.

NON-TREASURE ISLANDS.

By A. P. GARLAND.

STATISTICIANS say that, at a moderate estimate, there are scattered about the Spanish Main 1,734 islands, each of which is reputed to contain a buried heap of jewels, gold bars, doubloons, pieces of eight, pieces of nine, and so on. And they add that in support of this tradition there are at least 1,734 maps, each marked with a cross to show where the pirate treasure was buried.

It is not curious, then, that in spite of the scores of expeditions that have set out each year in search of these hoards, all that has been found has been a few bully-beef tins, cigarette ends, discarded socks, and the like—the debris of preceding expeditions?

No, it is not curious. It is just what we might expect. And for the simple reason that these alleged treasure-hoards do not exist.

Take the case of the party, headed by three Scots, that went last year to the small island of San Jose in search of the treasure of Gory Gentry. They had a chart, properly endowed with the skull and crossbones, without which none is genuine, and ample tools. Yet all the harvest they reaped was the skull of a mule and hay fever.

Now if treasure existed in San Jose, to suggest that three Scotmen couldn't find their way to it is an affront to common sense. They might have to tear the island into small shreds, but get that treasure they would. The only conclusion, therefore, is that the treasure didn't exist.

Pirates and Their Loot.
That really is feasible, I myself have no first-hand knowledge of pirates, but I'm sure they were not such nincompoops as to return to England home and beauty without the loot.

Fancy the bloodstained leader of a piratical crew stepping ashore at Wapping and suddenly scratching his head and bleating feebly. "Well blow me, if we haven't left the treasure behind. What a lot of plumbers we are to be sure!"

Would that get a laugh from the sweethearts and wives on the quay?
Would they say, "Never mind, lads, we're glad to have you back, anyhow?" My own personal knowledge of women makes me reject this notion.

But you ask, "What about the maps? Don't they mean anything?"
Must not a map be considered innocent until it's proved guilty?"

Well, my opinion is that these maps are all a part of one great piratical joke. A sense of humour was not lacking in our forebears who sailed under the Jolly Roger, and I can imagine how, in their idle hours, when they had polished their buttons and written to their best girls, a few of them would draw up these maps to hoodwink future generations.

"We shan't be here to see the results," they'd say to one another,
"but fancy these poor noodles getting all hot and bothered about treasures that aren't there! Teh-he!"

From the other side of the Styx comes faintly the hoarse crackle of Cut-throat Claude and One-Eyed Aubrey. They are laughing at us.

DON'T BE A "YES"-WIFE.

By NERINA SHUTE.

IT is easier to be the good, good wife than the bad, bad wife.
It requires less brain. That is the reason so many model young women sit patiently darning his socks, or mending the cushions, or reading a book about love, while George himself is "detained on business again."

The good-wife-girl is amazingly common. Everyone calls her a nice dependable sort. And everyone (except me) says what a shame it is that George should leave her at home all the time.

Mary never complains about George. She is loyal of course.
And she likes to pretend, for the sake of her pride, that his "business engagements" are bound to be more and more frequent. She tries to be gentle. She tries her hardest to do what is right. She can't understand why George is no longer attracted.

And So She Gives In.
Poor George! When Mary married she stopped using lipstick in order to please him. She gave up her outings with other young men because he was jealous. At first they had one or two quarrels about it. Then she gave in. Like most good wives she hadn't the wit to be anything else!

The man who marries a typical good-wife-girl is as much to be

CORRESPONDENCE.

"Homo's" Latest Reply.

[To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.]

Sir,—I feel very grateful to "Pussy" for her sympathetic interest and deep regret all the heart-breaking misunderstandings of which I appear to have been found guilty.

To Mr. K. B. Vaidya, I must apologise for unintentional mutilation. A friend had taken my copy of the Telegraph when I committed the crime, and I am uncertain as to whether imperfection of observation, retention or recollection was responsible—but, anyhow, "what is there in a name?"

One frequently hears the expression "from the sublime to the ridiculous." Mr. Vaidya, from the sublime, has definitely crashed to the ridiculous. I suggested in my reply to him that he was in danger of attaining too high an altitude by the introduction of philosophy into the discussion, and now feel impelled to protest just as strongly against the introduction of smelly drains. Not that I am prejudiced, in any way, against well-constructed drains. They are of infinitely more use to humanity than we newspaper correspondents. Mr. Vaidya appears to have acquired a somewhat distorted outlook from both drains and their inspectors. But for the drain-inspectors, we should probably all have died from plague or mumps centuries ago, and as for their "smelling nothing but dust and drains everywhere, even the most refined and pleasant spots appearing to them only as drains," one might, with equal assurance, claim that to a chimney-sweep everybody must be black, that an electrician necessarily disbelieved in darkness, that a doctor, when declaring his patient cured, is secretly convinced that the said patient's hopeless condition precludes the very idea of him being alive, or that to a pork butcher the streets are swarming with pigs joy-riding in automobiles.

The fallacy in Mr. Vaidya's analogy seems fairly obvious. A jaundiced-eyed man is the victim of a disease which influences his outlook on life, whereas the drain-inspector is a man, physically and mentally normal, who is engaged upon the prevention and elimination of such diseases. He does not, moreover, require the advice of a specialist in philosophy or psychology in the performance of his duties.

I regret the necessity for this discussion. Perhaps as a result of it, Mr. Vaidya will have managed to retrace his steps to mid-level before the end of the week. His concluding paragraph was the one bright spot in the column. The line I gave, "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," has, I admit, always appeared somewhat abstract.

What is there in the name, That which you call rose? Call it by some other name, It will smell as sweet.

Mr. Vaidya's amended version clarifies our ideas considerably, and yet the necessity for a measure of concentration still arises. "If we look to the inner meaning of the first line, it tells us that there is nothing in the name of a thing, but that we must look to its effect." Our friend hereby definitely eradicates all possible ambiguity—never bet on a horse, girls, till you see it win the race. Yours, etc.,

Macao Explosion.

Sir,—I read Mr. de Gray's letter on the Macao explosion in your issue of April 9, with interest.

I think it will come somewhat of a surprise to many of your readers to know that the people (sufferers) living in Flora (Avenida Sidonio Pais) in the vicinity of the disaster, had losses amounting to more than $400,000 (Hongkong currency). Not even a single cent was refunded by the Macao Government.

I hope that the Macao Government will take steps in the interests and right of the public generally.—Yours, etc.,

KENYA LAND PROBLEMS.

A COMMISSION OF INQUIRY.

London, Apr. 11. The Secretary for the Colonies has appointed Sir William Carter, late Chief Justice of Tanganyika, to be Chairman of the Commission of Inquiry into land questions in Kenya. Other members are Captain Frank Wilson, of Kenya, and Mr. Rupert Hemsted, late Senior Commissioner in the Kenya Government service, with Mr. S. H. Fazan, of the Kenya Administrative Service, as Secretary.

The Commission are asked to consider inter alia the needs of the brought a measure of peace and contentment which could not have been reached by any other means. Further, as a direct result of that settlement, the Irish Free State has participated in and contributed to notable constitutional developments of the last few years whereby the position of the Dominions, as equal members with the United Kingdom of the British Commonwealth of Nations under the Crown, has been defined and made clear to the world.

"It is true that the 1921 settlement did not result in the establishment of a United Ireland, but the Treaty itself made the necessary provision for the union of the two parts of Ireland if both had then been ready to accept it.

The Only Hope.

"As to the future, the Government in the United Kingdom felt its sufficient to state that, in their opinion, there can be no conceivable hope for the establishment of a United Ireland except on a basis that its allegiance to the Crown and its membership of the British Commonwealth will continue unimpaired.

Regarding the expressed determination to introduce a Bill into the Free State Parliament for removing the Oath from the Constitution, the reply reiterates the view of the Government of the United Kingdom that the Oath is an integral part of the Treaty settlement, and adds:

The Land Annuities.

"His Majesty's Government of the United Kingdom have publicly indicated on many occasions, in a most formal and emphatic manner, that they stand absolutely by the Treaty settlement, and to this position they most firmly adhere.

"Dealing with the land annuities, the British reply, to avoid misunderstanding, places on record their origin and nature. It says:—These are not payments from Government to Government. In principle, the main transaction is not one between two Governments at all, but between the Irish tenant purchaser and the holder of land stock, which is, of course, held both in Great Britain and in the Irish Free State. The position is that the annuities are collected by the Irish Free State Government from the tenant purchasers and are distributed through the National Debt Commissioners to holders of the stock.

"The Irish land annuities are, therefore, in effect, payments on the instalment system by the Irish tenant, for land which he has bought, which pass through the hands both of the Irish Free State Finance Ministry and of the National Debt Commissioners, and are ultimately received by the holder of Irish Land Stock."

"Binding in Law and Order." The reply proceeds to cite the text of the formal and explicit undertakings governing land annuities payment, contained in the financial agreement by the British and Irish Free State Governments on 12th February, 1922, and confirmed in the "heads of the ultimate financial settlement" between the two Governments, signed on behalf of both on 19th March, 1926, and discussed in the Free State Parliament some months later.

The British Government, says the reply, regard these undertakings and their character as "binding in law and honour on the Irish Free State, whatever administration may be in power, in exactly the same way as the Treaty itself is binding on both countries.

"The reply concludes with an expression of desire for continued friendly relations, adding that in the British Government's view "these relations cannot but be impaired by any failure in complete fulfilment of obligations deliberately undertaken."

Debate Likely.

When questioned in Parliament regarding the correspondence today, Mr. Thomas confined himself to saying that in their reply to the de Valera Government, they had "reaffirmed in unmistakable language that they stood absolutely by the Treaty settlement."

The Leader of the Opposition, Mr. George Lansbury, suggested that time might be requested for a debate after members had studied the White Paper, and the Prime Minister said he thought that very reasonable and would do everything to facilitate it.—British Wireless.

native population, present and prospective, with respect to land, and the desirability and practicability of setting aside further areas for present or future occupancy of communities or individuals of recognized tribes and of detribalized natives.

Among other duties is that of defining the area known as the Highlands, within which persons of European descent are to have a privileged position.—British Wireless.

PEACE PARLEY DEADLOCK.

LIKELY REFERENCE TO LEAGUE.

TALK OF WAR.

Shanghai, Apr. 11. The Sino-Japanese peace conference, which was to have met at three o'clock this afternoon, has been indefinitely postponed.

Asked why, a member of the Chinese delegation said: "We are awaiting developments at Geneva."

Conference May be Abandoned.

Shanghai, Apr. 11, 4.57 p.m. It is freely predicted that the Sino-Japanese conference will not be resumed, as the Chinese delegates believe the negotiations can never yield an agreement acceptable to China. Consequently they wish to refer the entire question to the League.

Had the Conference met this afternoon it would have been the fifteenth session.

While the breakdown of the Conference does not necessarily mean the resumption of hostilities, there are many Chinese who believe the issues can only be settled on the battlefield. For example, General Tsai Ting-kai, interviewed at Soochow, said: "Our only hope lies in resistance. Submission to the Japanese at the Shanghai Conference will inevitably lead to ruin."

Not Surprised.

London, Apr. 11. Little surprise has been aroused in official circles in London by the announcement of a breakdown in the Sino-Japanese negotiations.

Officials consider the Chinese and Japanese demands were most incompatible, and almost certain to lead to a deadlock. However, it is not anticipated that the breakdown will lead to a resumption of hostilities, and it is presumed that the unsuccessful discussions at Shanghai have been transferred to Geneva, but it is impossible to forecast the likelihood of success.

The Japanese demand for some guarantees that the situation which led to the recent fighting should not recur is regarded in London as not unfair, and officials express some surprise that the Chinese were unable to agree to the suggestion, provided it led ultimately to complete withdrawal of the Japanese troops.—Reuter.

Military Committee.

Shanghai, Apr. 11. Although the main Sino-Japanese conference has been indefinitely postponed, the military sub-committee met as usual this afternoon and discussed the locations of Chinese troops.

A bulletin issued later states that some progress was made, and the committee adjourned until tomorrow.

During the morning a survey of localities to be temporarily used by the Japanese forces upon withdrawal was completed by neutral delegates, and agreed to by the sub-committee.—Reuter Special.

Japan's Forces.

Tokyo, Apr. 11. Owing to the quietening down of the situation, the Navy Office has decided to recall the special landing parties of bluejackets which were sent to Shanghai at the time the trouble arose.

The first batch is leaving Shanghai to-day aboard the special service ships Nojima and Naruta.—Reuter.

Tokyo, Apr. 11. Imperial sanction has been obtained for demobilisation of the reservists of the Fourteenth Division, who were called up when the division was despatched to Shanghai in February.

It is understood that this will entail the recall of several thousand men from Shanghai, as well as the demobilisation of a large number serving in the home cadre.—Reuter.

"Not a Refusal."

Peking, Apr. 11. The League Commission spokesman, in an interview with foreign correspondents this evening, pointed out that press reports that the Manchukuo had refused admission to Dr. Koo were slightly inaccurate.

The message from the Manchukuo to Nanking said:

"It is sincerely desirable that Your Excellency takes measures to see that Dr. Koo will not come. Manchukuo."

The Commissioners do not regard this as a refusal, but merely a request, which presumably will be ignored.—Reuter.

(c) Finale.

The second programme, on Wednesday, April 20th, will consist of trios by Beethoven, Marx and Schubert.

BREAKER POINT OUTRAGE.

TROOPS CLAIM SUCCESS AGAINST REDS.

Peking, Apr. 11. It is learned here that the Chinese military authorities at Swatow now have no desire to pay for the ransom of the Lighthouse man Edwards.

The Chinese authorities claim to have defeated the second route Communist army, capturing many and surrounding the remainder on four sides.

Hence they hope to obtain the release of the captive British subject without the payment of ransom.—Reuter.

Captured in February.

Edwards was captured at the Breaker Point Lighthouse near Swatow on February 27. With him were his wife and children, also a Russian assistant keeper and his family. The whole party were carried off to the hills by the bandits. Two British warships were sent to Swatow to co-operate if possible with the Chinese troops who took up the pursuit.

After some campaigning during which they were closely pressed, the bandits released the women and children, who eventually reached Swatow in safety. Freed from the burden of the women and children the bandits were able to elude pursuit. Operations against them have not been going on for some time and minor successes have been claimed by the authorities at different times.

Dr. Wellington Koo to accompany the League's Commission of Enquiry to Manchuria has produced the worst possible impression in League circles, and it is felt that should the refusal be persisted in, it will lead to another serious situation.

The League Secretariat has been informed of the incident by Lord Lytton, who declines to proceed to Manchuria without Dr. Koo.

It is anticipated that this affair will come before the Assembly committee towards the end of the week, and the committee may adopt a strong line in face of the Manchurian attitude, which is attributed to Japanese inspiration. It is expected the Chinese delegation will ask for a meeting of the Assembly committee.—Reuter.

Tales of Rapine and Murder.

Harbin, Apr. 11. Terrible stories of rapine and murder are related by members of thirty refugee Russian families arriving here this morning.

They state that 600 bandits raided and looted villages in the Yablonya district on April 8, and scarcely any women escaped unmolested.—Reuter Special.

Claims For Damage.

London, Apr. 11. In the House of Commons this afternoon Capt. R. A. Eden announced that both the Chinese and the Japanese Governments had been informed that they would be held responsible for losses of British lives and property through their respective forces.

The Government will give careful consideration to the question of support for any claims for compensation.

Mr. J. S. Wardlaw Milne (Cons.) asked whether it was intended to establish an international committee in order to make representations at Shanghai, and Capt. Eden said he did not think so, for the present.—Reuter.

DON'T BE A "YES"-WIFE.

pitted as she is herself. It is hard to explain that the things which attract him in women are the very crimes he must try to suppress.

There are one or two women who firmly refuse to be fools about men. They make up their minds, even before they get married, to try to belong to the bad wife school.

It is rather a struggle they find. There are plenty of quarrels. The neighbours start talking. But a bad-wife-girl is prepared to be misunderstood.

The truth of it is that men are collectors. A good bad wife is hard to obtain. A bad good wife can be had for a song!

Women take pleasure in giving in to the people they love. They want to give in. And when they find that George is "detached on business again" they try to please him by waiting at home. They please him all right. That's the reason he suddenly gets rather "keen on his work."

I am not suggesting that men fall in love with women who "fool them." Only with women who "kid them along."

I am sorry for men whose wives go to pieces once they get married—the Murrys of "Yes, dear," unions, who stop using make-up, and dress like their mothers, in order to do what is right.

The greatest mistake that a young girl can make is to give her husband no trouble at all. It makes him unhappy, that's why. He likes to be worried. He loves to feel that unless he gets home on time she might easily go out with somebody else.

A "Yes, dear," a day keeps the husband away!

WORLD PROBLEMS.

SIR JOHN SIMON LEAVES FOR GENEVA.

London, Apr. 11. Sir John Simon left London for Geneva yesterday, travelling to Paris by air, and proceeding later by rail. He will be the chief British delegate at the resumed meeting of the Disarmament Conference, which opens at Geneva this afternoon.

The session will be devoted almost exclusively to the study of details in committee.

Sir John Simon will also represent Britain at the special meeting of the League of Nations Council called to consider the grave report of its financial committee on the serious situation facing the countries of Central and South-Eastern Europe.—British Wireless.

COMING SHORTLY TO THE QUEEN'S.

ARE YOU FEELING PAST YOUR BEST?

Members of the younger generation seem to get such a wonderful zest out of life, they are so enthusiastic about everything they do. No wonder parents often envy them. Their own day seems to be past.

Yet it is all mainly a matter of health. If you felt as fit and vigorous as they do, you would enjoy life's activities just as much. What you need is a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the world-famous blood and nerve tonic. Try them for a while and note how different you feel. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills purify and enrich the blood, thereby strengthening the nerves and revitalizing the system.

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

Bring Back Vigour & Health To Worn-out, Nervous, Men & Women

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills comprise a bona fide physician's prescription of proved merit for conditions arising from weak and scanty blood such as:

PREMATURE AGE, WEAKNESS & PALLORE, BACK PAINS, HEADACHES, DIGESTIVE & NERVE TROUBLES, INSOMNIA, RHEUMATISM & SCIATICA

H.M.S. VINDICTIVE ARRIVES.

OVER 600 RELIEFS FOR CHINA SQUADRON.

H.M.S. Vindictive, after being held up outside the harbour since 8 a.m. on Sunday by dense fogs, arrived at Hongkong yesterday morning, with reliefs for H.M.S. Medway and the submarine flotilla. The Vindictive moored alongside H.M.S. Medway, at No. 2 buoy at 9 a.m., and the disembarkation of the relief ratings for the submarines took place in the afternoon. A total of 120 officers and men were disembarked for the submarines, while 45 officers and men transferred to H.M.S. Tamar.

On Wednesday 300 officers and ratings will be exchanged with those aboard H.M.S. Medway who are to proceed Home by the Vindictive, and half crews will be transferred to H.M.S. Cleland and H.M.S. Tarantula. Forty-five Royal Marines and a few casual reliefs will complete the total of 680 officers and men who are to disembark.

The Vindictive only has a skeleton crew, and during the trip from Portsmouth was worked by the ratings who will be worked, on the return trip, by those who are proceeding Home. After disembarking the crew for the Medway, the Vindictive will move alongside the naval docks, where a large quantity of naval stores will be discharged. She will leave Hongkong on the return trip to Portsmouth on April 21.

The Vindictive is under the command of Captain E. McC. W. Lawrie, D.S.O. She left Portsmouth on February 16, and disembarked a new crew for H.M.S. Triad, Senior Officers ship in the Persian Gulf, at Colombo.

Among the ratings who returned to Hongkong by the Vindictive for another period of service in the China Squadron was Harry Ewin, the well-known service boxer, who was middleweight champion of the Colony during his last stay here.

"WANTED A WIFE."

I.R.C. MEMBERS REPEAT
SUCCESSFUL FARCE.

"Wanted a Wife," the farce produced by members of the Indian Recreation Club at their concert in September last year, was again successfully presented at Gun Club Hill last night, when funds were collected in aid of the Child Welfare Centre, Indian Troops.

The hall was crowded for the occasion, and everyone thoroughly enjoyed not only the play, but also the items of Indian music in the programme.

The play concerns the activities of a marriage broker, and from beginning to end is a riot of laughter. The marriage broker's part was cleverly acted by Mr. M. I. Razack, while Mr. R. M. Omar played the role of a merchant and Mr. F. M. el Arouil a returned student. They acted their parts in their usual capable manner. Other members of the cast included A. M. Rumi, S. Ismail, A. R. H. Esmail (in the role of a girl) and M. U. Razack. Prof. Gonzales also provided a violin and a piano fiddle solo, with Mr. Herrera at the piano. Another enjoyable item was provided by Mr. R. M. Omar, on "Cocher on the Telephone."

Berlin, Apr. 11.
President Hindenburg in a manifesto returning thanks for his re-election, promises to serve the Fatherland and nation with his whole strength, in a spirit of impartiality and justice.—Reuter.

THE LATE MR. M. MANUK.

This Society is the organization for which he cared most, and to which he has dedicated his heart and soul. He has worked here as long as he could work and sacrificed his physical body for the advancement of spiritual knowledge. He himself has risen to the still higher plane from where he is still helping and inspiring us.

I think the surest place where his soul can live and advance is the hearts of those who loved it and the minds of those which were impressed by it.

We owe him a greatest debt of gratitude. Let us do our best to continue the good work which he has started and entrusted to us (and pay off as much of the debt of gratitude that we owe to him as possible) by trying to fulfil his hope. He has helped us to understand ourselves and our brethren, to know and understand those greatest masters, so that by following their footsteps we may advance and approach the greatest master, our Spiritual Father.

May the Almighty protect his soul and keep him in his loving arms, with perfect peace and bliss.

Other Speakers.
Mr. Wolf Tat, the president of the Chinese Lodge, also paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the late Mr. Manuk, in the course of which he said:

Friends, Brother Manuk has gone. He has gone in the plenitude of his powers, in the noon of his popularity. But we know he is here with us to-night. He is living in every one of us and in every one of the beautiful flowers around us. I am now vividly conscious of his life and his love permeating every atom of my being, and I know he will live with us from eternity to eternity. But like Brother Russell we cannot help asking why it is that he was so suddenly called away at a time when we still need his guiding hand and his enlightening influence. Why is the perfect flower of humanity snatched away before its full blossoming, before the full expression of its fragrance?

Perhaps I may bring you the consolation that Bro. Manuk, as the messenger of the Great Ones, as one of the Company of Servers, belonged to this world only because for the time being he was sent here. Members of the Lord's Staff may be sent anywhere, to function on any plane, to serve in any world. As the Lord's messenger, he came forth to us, returning to Him as soon as the message has been delivered, be the delivery of it a piece of work, or an intimation of His will. He may only sow the seed, or carry the seeds to the sower, and has no concern with the greater harvest. He may go elsewhere long before the fields in which he has sown are ready for the reapers.

In this connexion, I can sincerely assure Bro. Manuk that the harvest which he has prepared in China will be a rich one, extending throughout the length and breadth of the Republic, because there is at least one soul who loves him so much and is so grateful to him that he has taken upon himself the mission of disseminating the Light and Truth which he has brought to us and which will unite all our classes, religions, vocations and political parties into one human and political brotherhood, fulfilling its special duty towards mankind, and contributing to its enrichment, its greatness and its beauty.

Work to Continue.
Dr. Ludwig Reichelt was the last to extend his appreciation of the memory of a good and just man, recalling his early association with the late leader and the latter's enthusiastic interest in

SCRAPPERS CLAIM U.S.S. HELENA.

OLD AMERICAN WARSHIP LEAVES THIS WEEK.

After thirty years' service in the China Sea, the old United States gunboat Helena, which is perhaps better known in shipping and naval circles than any other vessel in the East, is to be sent to Cavite, Philippine Islands, to be scrapped. The Helena was launched in January 1893, and after being commissioned in 1897, was sent for patrol duty on the Amazon River, in South America. She arrived at the China Station in 1902 and performed duty along the China coast and Yangtze River until 1917, when she was ordered to duty around Vladivostok and the Russian Islands, where she stayed until 1922. The Helena returned to South China waters, and was on patrol duty at Canton until 1927, when she was ordered to the Yangtze River patrol, remaining there for two years. She was transferred back to Canton and Hongkong in 1929 and has been here since, staying most of the time at Canton.

In the old days the Helena was referred to rather unkindly as "Jam Factory," on account of her unusually high funnel, which was, of course, constructed specially for the Amazon River patrol. The funnel was later shortened to its present height. The Helena is a sister ship to the U.S.S. Wilmington, which was also stationed in Far Eastern waters until 1922. The Wilmington is now being used on the Great Lakes as a training ship, and thus escapes the sad fate that is in store for the Helena.

The dimensions of the Helena are:—Length 251 feet, draft 9 feet, twin-screwed, speed 15½ knots. Her armaments consist of 8 four-inch 40 cal. guns and four three-pounders 12.30 cal.

The Helena came out of dock at Taikoo yesterday, and will leave Hongkong for Cavite on Friday. Owing to her age, and the risk of proceeding to open sea, the Helena will be escorted to Cavite by the U.S.S. Pecos, which came here especially last week to act as escort. After her arrival at Cavite the Helena will be de-commissioned and will be broken up.

Two of the best remembered former commanders of the Helena in South China waters are Admiral Thos. R. Washington, and Captain John M. Enoch. Admiral Washington, who was one of the earliest commanders of the Helena, retired from active service in 1925.

the sphere of work he had assumed.

Those present stood in a reverential silence while the benevolent spirit of the late leader was invoked for the work of the Society, which, it was announced, would be continued without interruption, meeting every Thursday evening as heretofore.

As soon as that could be managed, the official title of the organization would be changed to the Manuk Lodge of the Theosophical Society, in fitting commemoration of the work of a great teacher.

NOTED AMERICAN VISITOR.

MAJOR-GENERAL HINES IN HONGKONG.

Among the passengers by the Dollar liner yesterday morning, which arrived yesterday morning from Manila, was Major-General J. L. Hines, retiring commander of the U. S. military forces in the Philippine Islands. General Hines will report to the War Department in Washington before his actual retirement from active service.

Although 64 years of age, General Hines is a commanding figure. Well over six feet, he is lean and wiry. One would describe him as the "rawbone" type. During his West Point cadet days he was a football player, and it is said that he played in the first football team that famous academy ever had. His chief hobby now is riding, and at Manila he rode every morning before going to his headquarters, and on Sundays took his staff officers for long, cross-country rides.

Major-General Hines was born on May 21, 1868, at White Sulphur Springs, Virginia. He graduated from West Point in 1891, and was commissioned a Lieutenant in the Second Infantry of the Regular Army. It is interesting to note that among the campaigns he served in was the Philippine insurrection of 1901, when he fought against the Filipinos. He served in the Santiago campaign and was Adjutant General of a punitive expedition into Mexico in pursuit of the famous Villa.

General Hines sailed for France when America entered the Great War, and served as Assistant Adjutant General of the American Expeditionary Forces. He was rapidly promoted until, in August, 1918, he was made a Major General and assigned to the command of the Fourth Division. Over forty years of General Hines' life has been spent in the U. S. Army.

During their stay in Hongkong, General and Mrs. Hines will be the guests of H. E. Major-General J. W. Sandilands, G.O.C. the British Troops in China.

LUTHER'S ESCAPE.

ATTACK A GESTURE OF PROTEST.

Berlin, Apr. 11. Dr. Luther, the former Chancellor of Germany, who was shot at as he was entraining for Basle yesterday, is apparently little the worse for his experience.

Immediately upon arrival at Basle, where he is to represent Germany at the financial conference, he went to a doctor and had his wound bandaged.

It appears that Dr. Luther's assailant fired at him not with the intention of killing but with the object of drawing attention to the Reichsbank's "criminal currency policy."—Reuter's Special Service.

MURDER OF SIX WOMEN.

CROWDS THREATEN TO LYNCH MAN.

Vienna, Mar. 7.
Franz Leibel, who was arrested last month in Linz, Upper Austria, on suspicion of murdering a builder's wife, to-day made confessions to the police which, if they are true, show him to be a second Peter Kurten, the Düsseldorf vampire.

He has stated that between the various terms of imprisonment he has served (amounting to 20 years), he has strangled and robbed six women in various parts of Austria, one being his grandmother.

The authorities have been obliged to reinforce the guard of Linz prison, for hundreds of excited men and women have collected outside and threatened to lynch the man.

APACHE BRAVE ON TRIAL.

ALLEGED MURDER OF WHITE GIRL.

Globe (Arizona), Apr. 17.
A court room scene reminiscent of an Indian pow-wow was enacted here to-day when Golsby Seymour, a young Apache brave, was charged with the murder of Henrietta Schmerler, a 25-year-old Columbia University student, whose body was found slashed with knife wounds in the Indian Reservation at White River.

The sleek, youthful redskin prisoner was surrounded by a picturesque gathering of squaws and braves. These when called as witnesses were referred to by numbers, their actual names being unpronounceable on official lips. The chief witness for the prosecution is a special Federal agent who disguised himself as an Apache and lived for weeks among the Indians listening to their conversations, till he finally collected evidence alleged to implicate Seymour.

MEMBER OF COLLEGE CREW DROWNED.

"CRAB" CAUSES BOAT TO OVERTURN.

Joseph Henry Smith, who was training for the ministry at Dorchester (Oxon) Church of England Missionary College, Burck, near Dorchester, was drowned recently when a college boat in which a crew was training upset in the river.

Mr. Smith, whose home was in Yorkshire, went to the College about two months ago. The crew, BLANK SHOTS FIRED OVER TRAWLER.

MORE STORIES OF THE 80-MILE CHASE

There was a further hearing at Stornoway recently of the case arising out of a fishery protection cruiser's 80-mile chase of a trawler.

It is alleged that some of the members of the trawler's crew were disguised (one with red ochre on his face); that the vessel's registration number was obliterated; and that although the pursuing cruiser tried to wash the covering from the number by the means of the ship's hose the trawlermen painted it over again. The defendants, Charles Henry Taylor (master in the Fleetwood trawler Teroma), Walter B. Bowie (first hand) and John Brown (second hand) are charged with illegal trawling.

Taylor and Bowie are further charged with causing a collision by swinging the Teroma suddenly across the bow of the cruiser Norma.

Chief Officer Murray, of the Norma, was asked "Did you hear Captain Angus shout to the trawler that he would blow the top off his wheelhouse?"

"No," he replied.

Captain Angus instructed some blank shots to be fired?—Yes. Several were fired.

Murray said the Norma's engineer used forced draught to clean out the funes at the beginning of the chase.

Counsel: Wasn't your funnel red hot?

Murray: There is a casing round the funnel, and the inside one might have been red hot.

Rival Allegations.

Did you hear Captain Angus threaten to ram the trawler?—No, but I heard Captain Angus shout to the trawler that if he did not keep clear the trawler would ram the cruiser.

Didn't Captain Angus shout, "Look here, I am tired of this. I am going to ram you"?—No, but he shouted, "You beggar. If you don't watch you will ram me."

Did you hear Captain Angus shout to the trawler, "I have stood this long enough. I am going to mark you so that I will know you when you get to Fleetwood"?—I did not hear that.

The case was adjourned.

who manned a four-oared gig, were being coached by the Rev. H. Francis Kirkpatrick, who was on the towing-path, when one of the men "caught a crab."

The boat turned over. Three of the rowers and the cox swam to the shore, but nothing more was seen of Mr. Smith. Mr. Kirkpatrick jumped into the river and swam to the spot, but could find no trace of him.

The other members of the crew re-entered the water lower down, but repeated diving was unavailing. Police later dragged the river without success.

ACCIDENT LAW SURPRISE.

DRASTIC CHANGES IN PROPOSED BILL.

A revolutionary change in the law governing compensation actions following street accidents is to be embodied in a Bill promoted in Parliament by the Pedestrians' Association.

It is proposed that it will not be necessary to prove negligence on the part of the driver before he becomes liable for compensation. Nothing will be payable when want of care is shown on the part of the pedestrian.

It is stated in support of the measure that it is substantially the law in various European countries, and that it is applicable to aeroplane accidents in England.

Representative motoring organizations were unanimous in vigorous denunciation of the proposed measure when it was made known to them by a Press representative.

"It is utterly outrageous," said an R.A.C. official, "and we shall resist it with the utmost vigour. It is presumed in advance that the motorist is to blame, whereas the statistics of the Metropolitan Police show that in more than 60 per cent. of cases the accidents are due to careless walking. It is absurd to cite the law relating to aeroplanes, as a pedestrian cannot walk carelessly in front of an aeroplane nor can he dodge it."

An A.A. official said that the proposal was obviously unjust.

"The whole question of compensation was fully considered when the Road Traffic Act was drawn up," he said, "and there is no necessity to go into it again. In any case, the question of insurance would nullify it. It would be utterly impossible to obtain cover for such an increase of risk."

Sir Alexander Butterworth, a vice-president of the Pedestrians' Association, stated that as the law stood at present even a person injured on the pavement had no claim if the driver of the motorcar concerned was exonerated from blame.

HONEYMOON ARREST

ENGLISHMAN FACES CHARGES IN LAGOS.

Lagos, Mar. 18.
Basil Ranger Lawrence, a Nigerian Government official, who was arrested last December at Worthing while on his honeymoon, has been committed for trial here on charges of falsifying public accounts.

Lawrence was charged under the Fugitive Offenders' Act at Bow-street in February, but the proceedings were dropped to allow him to return voluntarily to Lagos to face the charges, which he denies.

He was released on £250 bail.

THE RUPTURE IN ARMISTICE NEGOTIATIONS

SHANGHAI TAKES GLOOMY VIEW.

RESUMPTION REGARDED AS UNLIKELY.

TIME-LIMIT OBSTACLE.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT).

Shanghai, Apr. 12, 1.52 p.m.
ALTHOUGH FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS IN THE SHANGHAI SITUATION ARE IMPOSSIBLE TO FORESEE, THE GENERAL TENDENCY IN FOREIGN CIRCLES IS TO TAKE A GLOOMY VIEW.

The armistice negotiations have been broken off and the prospects of their resumption, with any prospect of success, are felt to be remote. China's appeal to the League may bring forth a recommendation that Japan accept the principle of a time-limit, but as the Japanese delegation have been repeatedly told to refuse, in the face of much bickering with the Chinese and in spite of the suggestions of the neutral observers, it is felt that this would merely strengthen China's stand without producing any effect in Tokyo.

PROGRESS TO THE BREAKDOWN.

It is learned that the Japanese delegation were prepared Saturday to adopt the proposal of Sir Miles Lampson regarding the issuance of announcements declaring Japan's intention to withdraw completely, provided that no mention of a time limit was made.

The Chinese delegation, on the other hand, while not disposed to accept the British Minister's plan, insisted that if a settlement on those lines was reached, the time-limit stated in the Japanese announcement must be three months instead of six months.

NEUTRAL PROPOSAL.

Heated argument followed. The Japanese refused to consider the point, though the foreign observers appeared to sympathise with the Chinese attitude and suggested that a period of four months should be set.

This was regarded as unsatisfactory by both sides, who asked an fore completely deadlocked, with little hope of further negotiations, unless the League of Nations is able to persuade Japan to bow to China's wishes.

The Chinese Government, having failed to break the deadlock has decided to refer the matter to the League, asking the Council for further explanations regarding the spirit of the resolution passed on March 4.

A detailed report of the proceedings at the Shanghai peace conference sessions has been despatched to the Chinese delegation at Geneva. The armistice negotiations have therefore been broken off, no date having been set for a further meeting. The indefinite postponement of further pourparlers was made at the request of China, according to officials of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs, Shanghai Office.

MORE ARGUMENTS.

Meanwhile, the Military Subcommittee appears to be continuing with its work. Having completed an inspection of Kiangwan and Yinghsinghsiang yesterday morning, the committee met at three o'clock in the afternoon. Little progress appears to have been made. There were, it is understood, some very heated arguments about the Japanese demand for the retirement of the Chinese troops at Pootung. The Chinese delegates got angry every time the question is brought up.

An official statement was issued in the evening as follows: "A survey of the localities to be temporarily used by the Japanese forces upon their withdrawal was completed by neutral delegates and agreed by by the Military committee."

"The discussions regarding the localities for the Japanese troops was resumed in the afternoon and some progress made. The meeting adjourned until 3 p.m. on April 12."

adjournment in order to enable them to ask their governments for further instructions.

The Chinese delegation, on the receipt of further instructions from Nanking remain firm in their demand for the fixing of a definite time-limit for the complete withdrawal of the Japanese forces from Chinese territory.

The Japanese were equally adamant and the conference is there-

Prince Nicholas of Rumania and his wife, Mme. Savenau Dumitresco, in Paris. The Prince has been ordered to dissolve this morganatic marriage or renounce his rights.

LOYANG MESSAGE TO THE LEAGUE MISSION.

"Bogus" Manchukuo Government.

(Special to "Telegraph")

Loyang, Apr. 12.
The National Emergency Conference has authorised the despatch of a telegram to the Earl of Lytton and the other members of the League Commission, asking them to uphold justice and present an accurate report of the facts "so that world opinion may check Japanese military aggression."

The telegram adds: "After the Japanese occupation of Manchuria, the Japanese established the bogus Manchukuo Government. The Japanese object is merely to use the Manchukuo regime as a puppet government and as a screen for annexation of the country, which is China's territory."

"The League of Nations is the instrument of world justice. You are the peace envoys of human society. We hope you will report the facts and inform the world of the actual conditions so that impartial accounts of the Japanese outrages may be known and Japan exposed to the just indignation and censure of world opinion."—Reuter.

REIGN OF CHAOS IN MANCHURIA.

BANDIT AND REBEL ACTIVITIES.

Harbin, Apr. 12.
The troops of the old Kirin army who recently occupied Hantaohotze, where one of their leaders, General Li Du, is expected to-day, are searching all passengers upon the arrival of trains.

It is reported that a body of three hundred Chinese and Korean Communists, who are well armed and who speak Russian fluently, were transported free from Hailin to Lidaohotze on Saturday.

The Russian foreman and three Chinese railway workers have been taken prisoner by mounted bandits at Sandovoda, near Hongtaohotze.—Reuter.

CHINA NATIONAL ASSEMBLY.

Loyang, Apr. 12.
The National Government scored an important victory yesterday when, after a lengthy and heated debate, the National Emergency Council rejected resolutions advocating the reorganisation of the Government and the Kuomintang. The Conference finally decided to support the present government and to prepare for the convocation of a National Assembly to supervise the Government.—Reuter.

RAINING ASHES ON CITIES.

DISTURBANCES IN S. AMERICA.

Santiago, Apr. 11.
Volcanic eruptions and earthquake disturbances on an enormous scale are causing alarm and much damage throughout Chile and the Argentine.

The visitation is the worst in living memory. An area of roughly four hundred miles by seven hundred miles is affected.

The giant volcano Tinguirica and several minor peaks are pouring unceasingly a shower of ashes upon the surrounding countryside. The fall in some places is constant like a snowfall and here and there the ashes have already reached a depth of three feet!

Trains Held Up.

The darkness caused by the clouds of smoke and the ash-rain is seriously hampering business in the affected towns, while many trains have been held up by obstructions on the line caused by the emissions of the volcanoes.

This is particularly bad to the west of Buenos Aires, while at Montevideo, the ash-shower has continued without the slightest interruption for ten hours.

The quake shocks have been comparatively mild in character and little alarm is left on this account.—Reuter.

Berne, Apr. 12.
That the Federal Arms Factory at Berne has accepted a contract for the supply to an Eastern Power of four hundred, heavy machine-guns, was revealed yesterday when the Federal Council discussed Swiss armaments manufactures for foreign Powers.

It was pointed out that the Council was not empowered to prohibit the private manufacture of armaments.—Reuter.

FAMOUS WHEAT COUP RECALLED.

Chicago, Apr. 11.
Mr. Joseph Leiter, the millionaire brother-in-law of the late Marquis Curzon of Kedleston, died to-day of pneumonia. He was 63 years of age.

It will be recalled that in the autumn of 1897, he bought wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade to such an extent as to make him, at the beginning of 1898, the largest individual holder of wheat in the history of the grain trade.

He was President of the Ziegler Coal Company and a director of the American Security and Trust Company of Washington, D. C.—Reuter.

NO EFFECT ON LOCAL DOLLAR.

Despite the fact that silver is up a farthing in London, the Hongkong dollar remains at yesterday's figure of 1s. 2½/8d. The market locally is dull, with a slightly easier feeling apparent.

The London rise followed buying by China and the Continent. There were small offerings. After the official fixing, the market ruled idle, with buyers satisfied.

Shock of Double Crossing.

New York, Apr. 11.

It is reported that Mrs. Lindbergh has collapsed under the cruel disappointment of the failure of the kidnappers to return her baby after the ransom had been paid.

Mrs. Lindbergh's hopes had been buoyed up to a pitch of high excitement by the fact that her husband was personally in contact with the gang responsible for the dastardly outrage and was confident of success.

The double-crossing was more than she could bear.

Both the police and Colonel

Lindbergh are at their wits' end to know what to do next, though important results may possibly develop from a sensational incident at Greenwich, Connecticut, to-day, when a twenty-dollar note bearing the serial number of one of the notes paid by Colonel Lindbergh to the kidnappers was presented at a Greenwich bakery store by a woman.

FLOOD RELIEF IN CHINA.

GREAT WORK UNDER DIFFICULTY.

London, April 11.

The heroism of the Chinese crews of the launches engaged in delivering grain to the flooded areas along the Yangtze, often under the fire of bands of brigands and Communists, is mentioned in a cable received by the Emergency Appeal Committee from Sir John Hope Simpson, who is directing the flood relief organisation.

Sir John reports that the Dean of Canterbury, who has visited the devastated zones, was deeply impressed by the technical grip of the situation shown by the Chinese engineers in charge of the repair work on the dykes in the Hankow area.

Much of this district is infested by bandits and Communist armies.—Reuter.

VILLAGE ROAD MURDER CASE.

An extraordinary scene marked the proceedings before Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Central Magistracy this morning, when Cheng Kwok-yau, held in connexion with the murder of George Fung at Village Road, Happy Valley on March 24, made another brief appearance before the Magistrate.

Long before the case was due, a crowd of young and well-dressed Chinese men and women, streamed into the Court and overflowed into the corridor and outside passage. The proceedings were later somewhat delayed by clearing the Court of

THE ELECTION "A FARCE."

Munich, Apr. 11.

Hitler is a much disappointed man at the result of his failure in the election.

The election was a farce. If it had been run on democratic lines, the result would undoubtedly have been different, he told Reuter's representative this evening, declaring that the British people had no idea of the quantity and the variety of the unfair tactics employed against him.

Both the Government and supporters of President Hindenburg had stooped to every conceivable method in their efforts to muzzle the Nazi campaign, including denying them the use of wireless, muzzling the press, and forbidding political meetings in which the Nazis were interested on the most frivolous excuses.

Law and Order.

He alleged that on one occasion his speech was banned merely because it criticised the Government.

Hitler emphatically denied the suggestion that the Nazis intended to organise anti-Semitic persecution, declaring that Fascism stood for law and order not for anarchy.—Reuter.

CONSUL IN A BRAWL.

GRAVE AFFAIR AT MURET.

FRANCO-ITALIAN BATTLE.

PISTOLS USED.

(Reuter's Special Service).

Toulouse, Apr. 11.
The diplomatic wires between Italy and France are likely to be busy for a while following a most remarkable disturbance at Muret to-day, in which the Italian Vice-Consul at Toulouse was closely concerned.

The Vice-Consul had gone to Muret for the purpose of inaugurating a course of lectures in the Italian language for Italian children.

He was given an exceedingly hot reception, being greeted by catcalls and derisive whistles.

One of the demonstrators went so far as to shout: "You are representative of an assassin," whereupon the Italian Vice-Consul, really angry by this time, felled the speaker with his fist.

The blow was the signal for a most unseemly brawl which gradually developed into a very serious fracas in which there was a free exchange of sticks, bottles and revolvers.

FRIEND SHOT.

The Vice-Consul was hit upon the head and a member of his party was shot in the leg, whereupon the Vice-Consul drew a revolver and fired at his opponent, striking one in the jaw. Immediately afterwards the gendarmes appeared and put a stop to the fighting.

COLLAPSE OF N. Y. STOCKS.

ANOTHER HOOVER INQUIRY.

New York, Apr. 11.
In view of the concern with which the Administration regards the persistent fall in security prices, President Hoover has undertaken to arrange a conference of Congressional and business leaders to devise a means of improving economic conditions in the United States.

Cold water was poured upon the reports of the bear raid yesterday by Mr. Whitney, the President of the New York Stock Exchange, who told a Committee of Enquiry that bear raiding had not influenced the market.

He declared that the recent fall in stock prices was due to bona fide liquidation.—Reuter.

STOP PRESS.

Buenos Aires, Apr. 12.
Many thousands of inhabitants of the volcanic region in Argentina and Chile passed a sleepless night of terror, subterranean rumblings continuing all night long.

The town of Malargue, in the Mendoza Province of Argentina, appears doomed to be engulfed in the giant cracks which have appeared in the earth, while a choking pall of volcanic dust covers an area as large as England. An urgent demand for cylinders of oxygen and for assistance in evacuating the population has been issued from Malargue.

In some of the regions it is almost impossible to breathe the air, owing to sulphurous gas.—Reuter.

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

By W. E. McKenney;

Secretary, American Bridge
League.

The forcing system is without a doubt the most popular bidding system used by contract bridge players today. This system cannot be credited to any one particular authority, as the expert players throughout the country have all contributed something to its development. There are perhaps more books written on this forcing system than on all other systems combined. Each authority has his particular variation which he feels comes closer to producing satisfactory results in particular situations.

Every authority today uses some kind of a forcing or demand bid. A forcing or demand bid is a declaration made which signifies certain high card holding and absolutely requires partner to keep the bidding open in case the left hand opponent of the forcing bidder passes. Our next few articles will explain the straight forcing system with all of its popular variations including those of the writer.

It is not necessary that a player understand auction before he takes up contract. As a matter of fact it is more difficult for one who has just a fair knowledge of auction to change over to contract, as they will constantly use auction tactics which will not produce satisfactory results due to the exactness required in contract bidding.

The first thing the beginner at contract must learn is to value his hand in two ways:

Defensively—the number of tricks it will take if opponents play the hand.

Offensively—the probable number of tricks it will take when played at your own or partner's best suit, e.g. You hold:

Spades—7-4
Hearts—K-Q-J-10-9-8-4
Diamonds—6-2
Clubs—7-3

Offensively this hand will take six tricks if played at hearts, but defensively—let us say against a club declaration by opponents—it is doubtful if it will even take a trick. The ace of hearts will naturally kill off the king of hearts and in all probability your queen of hearts will be trumped.

While if you held the following:

Spades—A-K-5-2
Hearts—A-K-2
Diamonds—A-8-3
Clubs—J-7-4

Offensively you can count the ace and king of spades for two tricks, the fourth spade if played at spades as one probable trick, and the ace and king of hearts and the ace of diamonds, giving you six probable tricks if played at spade. Defensively you hold five quick tricks.

While the first hand contains six probable tricks if played at hearts, it has no defensive value and therefore does not have the requirements for an original bid. The second hand has the same number of probable tricks, but it also contains five defensive tricks—enough high card tricks to make a forcing two bid, but not quite enough probable tricks—but is an unusually strong opening bid.

THE ONLY WAY TO END INDIGESTION.

REMOVE THE CAUSE AND YOU
REMOVE THE PAIN.

Nine-tenths of digestive troubles are caused by food fermentation and excess acid in the stomach, and it is only by ending these conditions that permanent relief can be hoped for. The quickest, safest, and surest way to do this is to take a little "Bismarck" Magnesia in water, after eating or whenever pain is felt. This not only stops fermentation and neutralizes excess acid, but exerts a soothing healing and strengthening influence on the weakened stomach, and induces normal healthy digestion. That is why doctors and nurses everywhere recommend "Bismarck" Magnesia. Follow their sound advice, get a package of "Bismarck" Magnesia powder or tablets from your store or druggist dealer at once, and ensure stomach health, with the fear of dyspepsia banished for ever.

THE LATE MR. M. MANUK.

THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY
TRIBUTES.

SOLEMN MEETING.

A meeting in memory of the late Mr. Malcolm Manuk, the founder and mainstay of the local Theosophical movement, was held at the lodge of the Society at Queen's Road Central last evening.

On a table on the rostrum where the late President often was to be seen, conducting the weekly meetings of the Society, was a solitary lighted taper and incense rising from a brazier. In the chair which he was wont to occupy, was a basket of his favourite flowers, while other flowers were disposed about or were strewn on the platform.

A silence fell on the gathering as the first speaker rose to address the meeting.

Mr. John Russell, speaking from the rostrum, asked them not to regard the occasion as a memorial service—to dissociate the idea completely from their minds, and to enter upon the proceedings in the spirit of a service of appreciation, because their founder and leader could never be a memory. He must and always would be a living force to all those who had the privilege of coming into contact with him.

They were gathered there that night to appreciate the wonderful work and the great influence which their late teacher had given to all those interested in the Theosophical movement in China, particularly in Hongkong, where the movement was initiated ten years ago by him and a few other brothers.

Mr. Russell then spoke eloquently of the late Mr. Manuk's life, his work, and his inspiration to others.

Mrs. Talati's Tribute.

Mrs. Talati said: I have to say a few words with a very heavy heart. My husband and myself are among those who had the advantage of listening to the late brother Manuk's inspiring teachings since the beginning of this Lodge, so we feel ourselves most indebted to him.

His passing away, so unexpectedly, has been certainly a great shock and a very heavy loss to all of us; but just as his life has taught us useful lessons, his passing away so suddenly has also taught us useful lessons, that is to understand the uncertainty of physical existence and not to leave for to-morrow what we can do today; and to do our duty towards each other as promptly as possible, just like he did, and keep prepared to submit to the Creator's will. Brother Manuk realized the unity, eternity and omnipresence of the spirit of Life and always tried to impress these ideals upon our minds; so let us believe that his spirit is surely here at present knowing and seeing all, helping all to be calm and peaceful and strong, and inspiring all to continue the work which he has entrusted to us and which he loved best.

The dime-a-dance girl

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

Beautiful Ellen Housler, who works by day as a salesgirl in Barclay's Department Store, lives with her mother, Molly Housler, her elder sister, Myra, and her 12-year-old brother, Mike. Irresponsible Molly has long since spent the fortune left by her English husband and the two girls support the family. Molly foolishly spends money saved to pay the rent. Ellen decides to work at night as a dance hall hostess until the sum is made up. She goes to Dreamland and interviews Jacob Salomon who offers her a job on condition that she supply her own evening dress. She has no evening dress. When she tells him of her problems he offers to give her a dress but she refuses to accept it. He then offers to lend her one of the dresses worn by the models. She borrows a lovely white tulle frock.

Ellen is half-pleased, half-fretted, by Barclay's obvious interest in her.

CHAPTER IV.

When Ellen accepted Steven Barclay's offer to drive her to Dreamland she did so with the same naturalness he had shown in extending the invitation. Their friendship had made such strides that her only hesitancy sprang from the vague fears which had troubled her in his office, fears that his name would be linked with hers by gossiping fellow-workers.

But Barclay himself had no such fears. He moved in a different world than his employees. He would have been amazed had he dreamed of the complicated feelings of many of them, of their bitter narrowness, of their jealousy and envy of those more fortunate. He was too naturally modest to imagine that his coming and goings, however trivial, were of absorbing interest to scores of men and women who had never met him. Nor did it occur to him that he might be subjecting a girl to the breath of scandal.

But as Ellen sank back into the soft depths of dove-grey cushions and turned her rosy face to him he felt a pang as of anticipated pain. And he believed then that he had been unwise.

He had not known until then why he had been so uneasy and so restless after Ellen had left his office that afternoon; he had not known why the routine business of the store had become so suddenly unimportant or why the hours had dragged so endlessly. But he knew now as Ellen shyly smiled at him that he felt that same light restlessness that he thought had left him years ago. And that was impossible. He was 57. Ellen was young enough to be his daughter. Almost roughly he leaned forward and gave the driver directions for reaching Dreamland. When he offered Ellen a cigarette and pulled out the lighter for her no one would have guessed that he imagined he had, in the brief space of seconds, put away from him a small, vague dream.

At his look of surprise she explained. "You see the people we live among and, for that matter, my family, too, are so poor that we must be respectable. On any debatable point—like smoking for women—we're all ultra-conservative. Not," she added still in that light strain, "that I lie awake nights longing to smoke. I don't like it really. If I did I'd smoke. I'm sure you would. But I'm rather glad you don't. I can't get used—"

He broke off abruptly and thought that there was no use appearing in her eyes as an old fogey even if he were old enough to be her father. With Ellen's permission they drove through Central Park before going to the dance-hall. Central Park in the languid twilight was relaxed and quiet after the fierce heat of the day. On the bridge paths there were a few horseback riders, their habits crumpled, their horses at an apathetic trot. But neither the horses nor the riders appeared to be enjoying themselves.

The benches were crowded with workers who had stopped on their hurried way home to draw what solace they could from the dusty green of the park. The air was shrill with the confusion of childish shouts. Scores of children ran up and down the footpaths and scattered about the lake, sending out small boats on the placid surface.

Darkness drew in and lights began to pierce windows of the giant apartment houses overlooking the park. A light breeze sprang up. One by one the benches were empty.

plied. The last toy boat capsized on the lake. The last cross and sleepy child was dragged away to supper.

The park grew quiet. The limousine swished to a stop at the Casino where early diners, men and women in evening clothes, leaned across softly lighted tables talking and laughing. Ellen and her escort went inside for iced drinks. Neither of them was hungry.

Ellen looked around with wide-eyed pleasure at the other diners, successful men and lovely, well-dressed women. As her eyes returned to the handsome man opposite her she began to feel a singling in her heart.

What fun to be so rich! What fun to be driven in a limousine wherever you wanted to go! What fun to stop at a smart restaurant because you were thirsty, to be served by an impressed headwaiter, to have every wish anticipated. Care and worries drifted away from her. The hurried, clattery morning with its clashing of milk cans and jangling alarm clocks seemed years away. Here there was only peace and beauty and leisure.

She began, did Ellen, to weave those swift dreams of girlhood, those dreams that need so little substance. Although Steven Barclay did not guess it his own shadowy figure moved through those fancies.

They drove almost quietly to Dreamland, absorbed in their separate thoughts. They stopped off Broadway. Ellen carefully picked up the box which held the precious dress and stretched-out her hand to Barclay.

"I can't tell you," she said breathlessly, "how much I appreciate what you've done for me."

Above them, through the open windows, came a clashing of brasses and a ringing of strings. The orchestra at Dreamland was tuning up.

"I'm glad I could do it," Barclay replied.

He meant to stop there. But he heard himself saying what he had not intended to say.

"I would like to do a great deal more for you."

Ellen's heart throbbed queerly but her voice was steady as she told him that he had done a great deal too much already. She was self-conscious, a rare thing for her, as she climbed the stairs—self-conscious, and now that she was away from Barclay and what he stood for, a little dissatisfied with herself. How foolish to imagine that the fact Steven Barclay had lent her a dress meant anything except that he was a kind and generous man.

What did she know of him after all? He was rich and she had idly dreamed of becoming his young and adored wife, dreamed of the beauty that as Mrs. Steven Barclay she could bring into the lives of Myra and Molly and baby Mike. Dreamed, too, of herself in thin, gay frocks, never chosen for utility, moving in the pleasure spots of the world with never a thought of work or care.

She stepped into Dreamland and ran straight into Jacob Salomon. His face broke into a wide grin.

"Hello—you're back. And with the dress, too, I see. Quick work, kid."

Ellen's chin came up. "I might as well tell you," she said coolly, "that I intend to work here only temporarily. For three weeks at the most."

"I won't," Ellen replied, ignoring his heavy-handed sarcasm. "Guess this is the only one I didn't tell you about."

He pointed to a sign on the bright pink plaster wall. Ellen read that the hostesses were permitted no conversation while dancing except "yes" or "no" in answer to questions. She turned her amazed face to Salomon.

"Oh," said Ellen blankly. "Our specialty's chop suey," he continued importunately. "Price $1—75 cents to me, 25 cents to the hostess. Thirty-five if the chop suey isn't eaten but that means you can't mess in it with your fork. It has to be good enough to serve again."

Ellen giggled. "The joint's straight," he assured her seriously. "We don't serve liquor. We don't even admit men that have been drinking—much."

She was a little perturbed by his cheerful outspokenness but she meekly allowed him to pilot her to a cramped dressing room and to introduce her haphazardly to the other girls, some 15 in number. He used no last names. The

CAMPAIGN AGAINST KILLING METHODS.

A correspondent signing himself "Humanity" sends us a pamphlet distributed with Overshoes in which a world-wide appeal is made against the horrors of trapping fur-bearing animals. The pamphlet is by Major Charles Van der Byl.

The author points out that from eight to 10 beavers are killed for one coat and about 80 mink skins make one wrap, and adds that practically all animals with paws undergo tortures in the steel traps and that if women knew these things they would never buy another trapped fur.

girls were Alice and Dolly and Sunny and Anne and Mazie to him, Ellen assumed they were to be that to her.

Salomon had not knocked but nobody appeared surprised. A few of the girls reached for kimono with mechanical squeals of dismay but most of them serenely continued their toilet. One hard little youngster, whom Salomon called Tony, deliberately pulled her one-piece dress over her head and stood in brief shorts and a soiled satin uplift, grinning at them.

A brightly painted screen, gaudy with peacocks and pagodas, concealed a washstand in one corner of the small, hot room. Ellen went behind it to dress. The quarters were cramped and stifling but she did not mean to risk another of Salomon's unconventional entries.

When she emerged only two hostesses were left in the room—Tony and a languishing blonde called Anise. They shared a wicker bench, where they had sat smoking and waiting to have a first-hand look at the new hostess.

Ellen looked toward Tony—and met a pair of coolly hostile eyes. (To be Continued.)

FIFTEEN RUSTY SWORDS.

$100 FINE IMPOSED FOR POSSESSION.

Fifteen rusty swords were produced at the Kowloon Magistracy as exhibits before Mr. Fraser this morning when a district watchman named Kam Ping was charged with being in possession of the weapons.

Detective Sergeant Moran informed his Worship that the police raided the second floor of No. 7, Temple Street, where they found the defendant and the weapons.

The premises were said to be occupied by the Overseas Chinese Magicians' Society, which was formed on the 29th of last month. The police could not prove it, but Sgt. Moran suggested that the Society was an unlawful one, and the weapons were used for an unlawful purpose. They could be used to intimidate people, he added.

Sergeant Moran said if defendant had applied for a permit through the proper channels, he would probably have got one. A fine of $100, or six weeks, was imposed.

The "Empress of Russia," from Shanghai, is due here on Thursday at 2 p.m.

SIR JOHN SIMON LEAVES FOR GENEVA.

London, Apr. 11.

Sir John Simon left London for Geneva yesterday, travelling to Paris by air, and proceeding later by rail. He will be the chief British delegate at the resumed meeting of the Disarmament Conference, which opens at Geneva this afternoon.

The session will be devoted almost exclusively to the study of details in committee.

Sir John Simon will also represent Britain at the special meeting of the League of Nations Council called to consider the grave report of its financial committee, on the serious situation facing the countries of Central and South Eastern Europe.—British Wireless.

The Empress of Asia arrived at Vancouver yesterday.

The Royal Observatory reports that the anticyclone has passed into the Pacific to the east of Tokyo. The depression has moved into the Eastern Sea to the north of Oshima. The Tongking depression has filled up. Local forecast:—East winds, moderate; cloudy; fog or light rain, probably improving.

ROYAL ROMANCE.

NICHOLAS.

Bucharest, Apr. 11.
The troubles of Prince Nicholas of Rumania have not yet ended, for King Carol is still resolutely refusing to recognise his brother's marriage to Madame Savenau.

Prince Nicholas yesterday arrived by air from Budapest unaccompanied by Madame Savenau, who is remaining at Paris.

A Throne Council has been convened and Prince Nicholas is reported to have been given three days in which to divorce his wife or renounce all his rights.

Prince Nicholas has arrived here apparently in order to interview the King personally.—Reuter's Special Service.

WOMEN'S WORLD

IN NEW ACCESSORIES.

Accessories adroitly pay homage to the Washington bi-centennial this spring by reflecting a Colonial inspiration. Steel buckles appear as one of the smartest trimmings for pumps, and belts of leather.

A chic bag and belt of patent leather have a modern version of a simple Colonial steel buckle; a classic opera pump uses a cut steel buckle with a coloured backing to match the frock with which it is worn; a tongue pump, with a distinct Colonial flavour, heightens its period design of using a square cut steel buckle for decoration.

TO-DAY'S RECIPES.

After-Dinner Sweets.

These days, while no one has money to spend unnecessarily, the housewife may feel that she ought to forego that luxury, the after-dinner sweet. But as a matter of fact this need not be an extravagant gesture, for the following recipes show how some delicious bon-bons may be made at quite inconsiderable expense.

After-Dinner Mints.

Dissolve 1 oz. instant powdered gelatine and 1 lb. loaf sugar, in a breakfastcupful boiling water and boil for two minutes. Add enough green colouring to make the sweets a pleasing shade and stir in a teaspoonful essence of peppermint, or more if a strong flavour is desired. Rinse some flat tins with cold water, pour in the mixture to a depth of about 1 inch, and leave till cold and set. Cut into cubes with a sharp knife, which must be constantly dipped in boiling water, and roll the cubes in finely-sifted icing sugar.

Salted Almonds.

Blanch 4 ozs. almonds (by soaking in boiling water and then removing the skins), and dry them. Into a small aluminium pan put as much butter as will be about an inch deep when melted, and when a blue smoke rises from this put in the almonds all at once and fry till nicely browned. Have ready mixed on a white paper some salt and a little cayenne, and toss the almonds in this till they are nearly cold.

Muzripan Slices.

Boil 1 lb. loaf sugar in 1½ teacupful water for 10 minutes. Draw the pan to the side of the stove, and when slightly cooled add 12 ozs. ground almonds and the yolks of 2 eggs. Stir by the side of the fire for a few minutes, turn out on a slab or board, stir in 2 ozs. sifted icing sugar, and work the paste with a wooden spoon till cool enough to handle. Knead till quite smooth, divide into three portions, and colour these brown, red, and green. Flavour the brown with coffee, the red with rose or raspberry, and the green with vanilla. Roll the pieces out to a uniform shape, about ¼ inch thick. Brush the brown pieces over with water, lay the green over it, brush the green with water, and lay the red on it. Press with the rolling pin to make the different pieces stick together, then brush the surface of the red with water and cover with water paper. Press with the rolling pin again, turn the muzripan over, wet the surface of the brown paste, cover with water paper, and press with the rolling pin again till the paper adheres. Leave to set and dry, then cut into thin slices and shape these as you like.

SIMPLIFIED WIRELESS.

The newest wireless sets solve the problem of discovering the whereabouts of the most obscure foreign stations obtainable on the sets. Just above the tuning-in dials is placed a small map of Europe, with the names of the various wireless

FASHION NOTES.

Paris Millinery.

Many of the Paris hats this season are really charmingly pretty and easy to wear, and others, I am sorry to say, are even more monstrously ugly than the hats we have been wearing for the last four or five months.

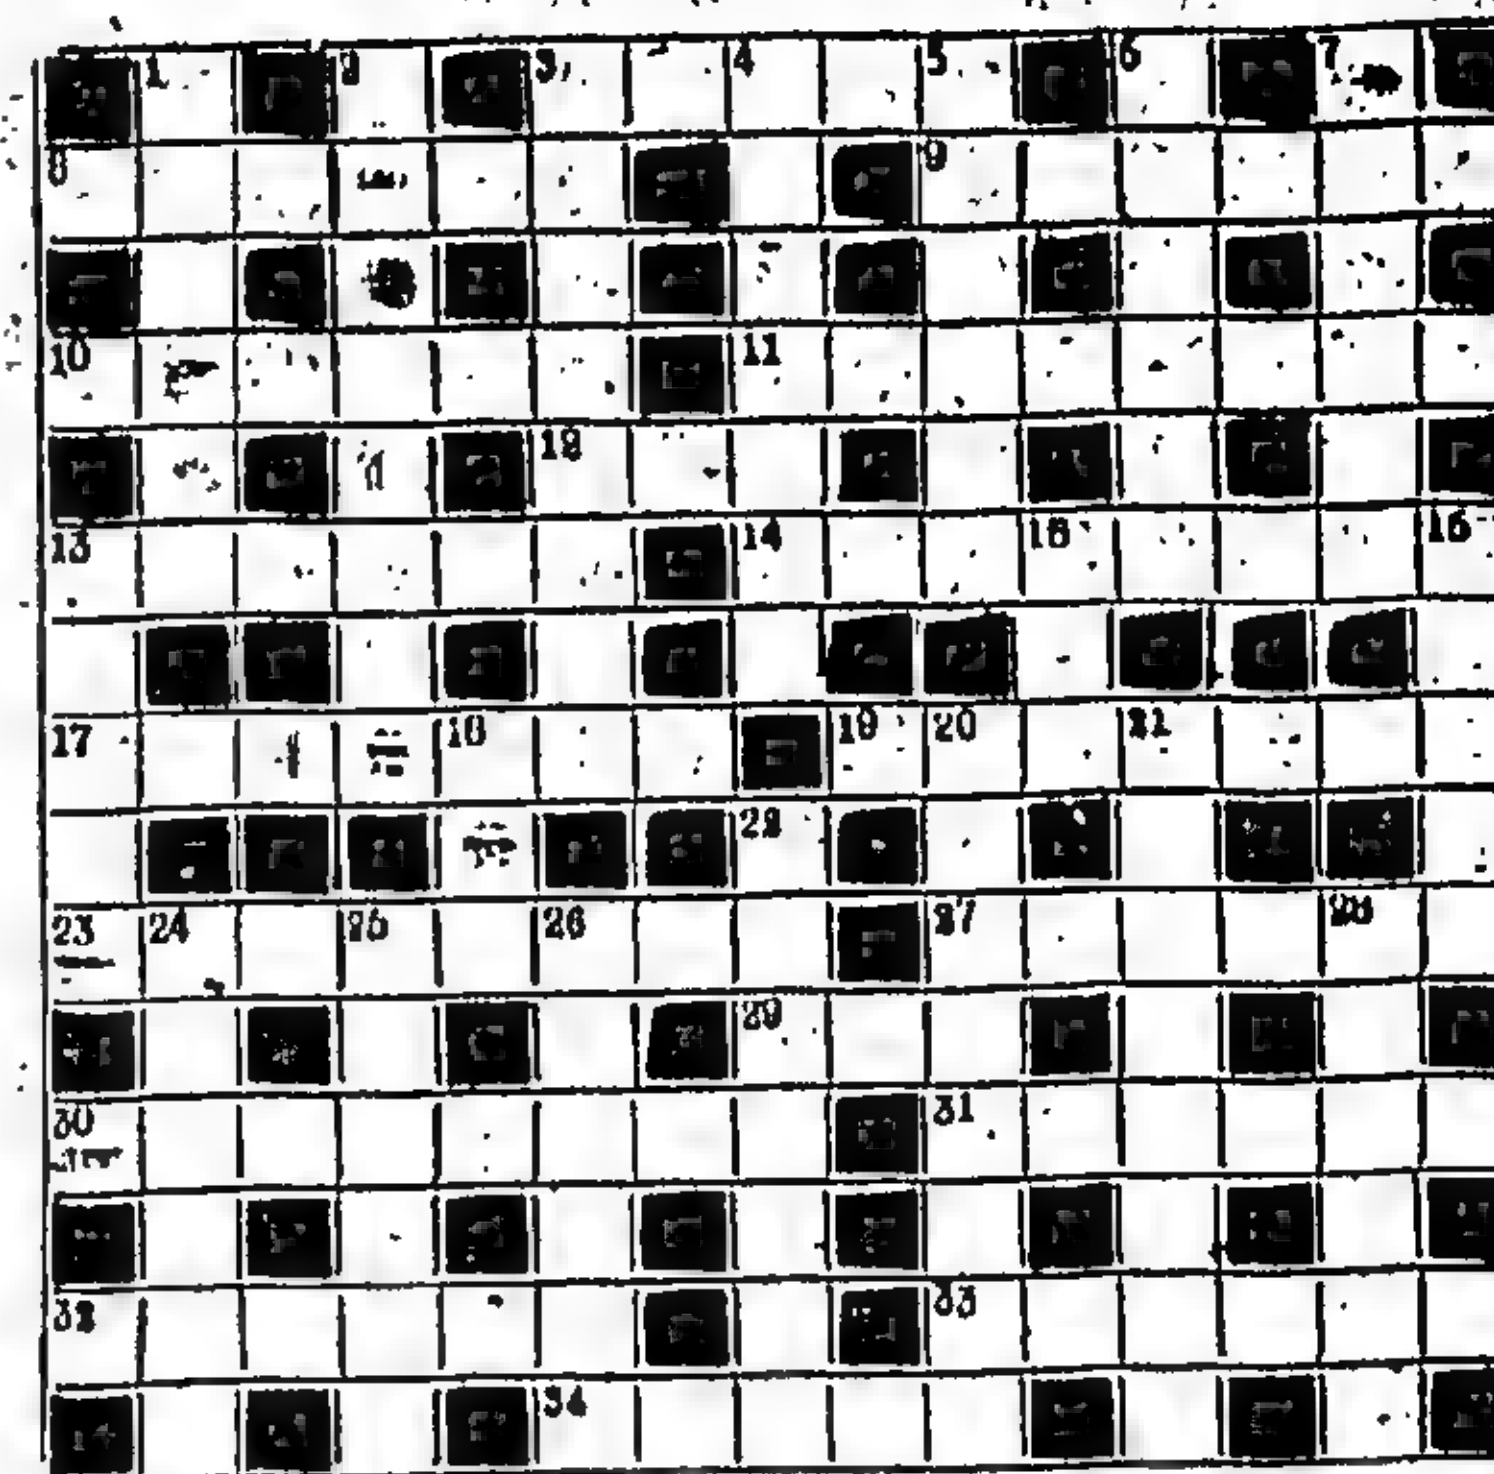

The Spring hats are, of course, small and close-fitting. Although they are cut to expose all the forehead, and even a little hair above it, the majority are provided with a kind of brim.

The hat, which is on the crest of the wave at the moment is the round little cap, which just covers the back of the head, and has a padded halo-like trimming. Close-fitting little shapes worn well on the side of the head, showing hair that is immaculately waved and dressed are noticeable for town-wear.

Some of these little caps have a gros-grain ribbon attached to them at the back, but unattached in front, with several inches of hair showing between the ribbon and the hats themselves. Delightful little hats, or rather caps, modern interpretations of the old Persian head-wear are being worn with many of the new costumes.

EASY MONEY.

There is, we suppose, no part of the world in which the obsession to make riches quickly by means of share speculation does not periodically manifest itself. We have seen the process operating in England, the United States and many other countries, whilst even here in Hongkong we are by no means unacquainted with this feature of life. And although it is the case that big sums of money are made in this way, it is unfortunately also true that big sums are lost by people who think that easy profits are to be secured by speculative operations in stock and shares. There will, of course, always be this kind of speculation, just as there is speculation in exchange and in commodities. Human nature being what it is, this is inevitable. The trouble usually arises when "small people" with nothing at their backs, enter the market in a frame of mind which visualises only the profits and takes no account of the possibility of the market going against them. It is in periods of severe liquidation, from which no market is immune, that those who are hit are often those least able to stand the loss.

It is when we contrast the moneyed speculator with the man who has nothing but hope that we see how much better a chance the former has than the latter when markets begin to fall. The little operator usually works on a small margin, or no margin at all, and consequently at the first appreciable break of prices he either has to put additional funds into his brokerage account in order to maintain the stipulated margin, or else is sold out at a loss. Little wonder that when stocks slump heavily, these "small fry" should find that their accounts have been liquidated, with resulting large losses to them. Large traders, on the other hand, make a study of the market and the factors which are likely to influence it, just as the ordinary business man studies his business. In some instances, it is true, the study appears rather superficial and insignificant, but nevertheless it serves a distinct purpose and gives these individuals a great advantage over the outsider. And of equal importance is the fact that the big operators frequently have "inside" information upon which they are able to act to their advantage. The net result is that in the majority of cases the professional speculator is either "out of the market" when a major reaction comes, or else has so reduced his holdings of securities that he has little fear of calls being made upon him for additional margin. In other words, the professional speculator is able to ride out the liquidation, and probably buy additional stocks when they are low, while the small man goes into the liquidation in an overloaded condition and sooner or later flounders and sinks.

It is not to be supposed, however, that even the experts can always foretell a reaction in the market. Very far from it. The most expensive share market economic service in the world would not assure one against being caught from time to time. Otherwise the element of risk would be eliminated from one of the most complicated and sensitive business activities in the world. It is obvious, nevertheless, that the opinions of experts are valuable, even though they are wrong every now and then, and it is just as foolhardy to ignore the constituents of the stock market and still expect to make money as it would be to begin the manufacture of motor cars without knowing anything about physics and mechanics. Until this truth is more widely recognized we shall continue to hear periodically of the savings of thousands of individuals being lost because they think they can "beat the market."

Novels, Short and Cheap.

Many attempts have been made to entice the British public into buying cheap novels, but experience does not show so far that the public wants them. It apparently would rather pay the price and keep the book as a solid, respectable piece of interior decoration; or go to a library and borrow a book for next to nothing. The paper cover of the very cheap book has something to do with this attitude. They may order these things better in France, but the English public, with its native respect for appearances, finds it hard to believe that a book in a paper cover is worth reading or buying. A few shelves of these dog-eared volumes would be declared untidy. These are some of the prejudices against which yet another British publisher has gone to war, and his boldness has come to unusual and original lengths. Three new short novels—they are about half the ordinary length—by such reputable writers as Miss Naomi Royde-Smith and Messrs. J. D. Beresford and Eden Phillpotts are among the recent batch this publisher is issuing at ninepence. They are original, hitherto unpublished works. They are pocket size, bound in fairly stiff paper covers, and the intention is to reverse the usual process of publication by beginning with this cheap edition and progressing to dearer cloth-bound ones as occasion—chiefly in the form of the libraries—demands. It is too soon to know what success this venture will have against English prejudice, and it is not easy to see what advantage there is in the scheme for either the established or the new author. But it is only from the author's point of view that the prospects can be discussed with any safety at the moment. It is he who will largely determine the success of the venture. On the present basis of the seven-and-sixpenny novel in England the author is not obliged to have the spectacular success which will be required by the ninepenny book (with its penny royalty) for the same financial return. He knows that his dear books will go on selling as they get cheaper, but he will find it hard to believe that his cheap books will go on selling as they get dearer. He may take the view that to issue a short novel in this series is equivalent to selling it outright to a magazine—which might conceivably pay him much more—and one wonders if this is the surest way of getting his best work. In England one commits the wild act of buying a book as an act of faith. You may know our faith by our books, but you can never know it by our borrowed books—that is, broadly speaking, the English attitude. There is indeed, as things stand in English literature at the moment, a great deal to be said for dearer, fewer and better books.

The death took place at the Government Civil Hospital on Sunday of Mr. Jhanatal D. Mahani, a member of the Sindhi Community. The deceased had been residing in Hongkong together with his family and leaves a son and a daughter. The funeral took place yesterday, the local Indian shops closing as a mark of respect.

CARD-GAMES AS SCHOOL SUBJECTS.

By "SLAM"

AN intellectual card game might advantageously be included as part of the curriculum at our schools, both for boys and for girls. American writers to-day are strongly advocating the same thing. Some form of bridge would be above all other card games, the one best suited for scholastic purposes.

The best opportunity for starting our young people at a card game would be upon their leaving their preparatory schools for more advanced ones. This change takes place at the age of thirteen or fourteen. Children's minds are at that time most receptive to the teaching of any fresh subject in which they can be interested.

Application to the study and practice of some such card game as bridge would serve in a marked degree to stimulate the powers of observation and deduction in school children. Both in observation and deduction, the mind has to act very quickly at the card table. Decisions must be made promptly, and promptly acted upon.

Again, apart from the mental training derived from the actual playing of the cards, the minds of the players are kept well on the alert in looking after the score and settling it quickly and correctly. This should help to improve the arithmetic of our young people, many of whom are decidedly deficient in this direction, and often in after-life develop into very bad "adders," which may seriously handicap them.

Then, again, such a partnership game as bridge should serve as character-forming and character-reading training for our young people. As with their elders, there would be those among them who would lose with a good grace and without grumbling, and those who would do just the reverse. Again, like their elders, there would be among the juveniles generous players, always prepared to condone mistakes, and carping ones over ready to cavil at their partners. "Always blame, blame, blame—but never a word of praise" seemingly being their slogan.

With these examples before them young people under proper supervision should learn to appreciate courtesy and consideration for others, and to practise both. Again, for those who are likely to have opportunities of playing bridge when they go out into the world a preliminary course of the game at school should prove most advantageous.

A fact which should be borne in mind, too, when bringing up our young people is that bridge to-day is a great social asset. I do not, however, mean to convey the idea that I consider card playing should be indulged in to excess and at the expense of more useful or more artistic occupations; nothing of the sort.

Bridge provides opportunities for the association of our young people, upon very genial terms, not only with those of their own age, but with their elders, among whom they may find someone who is in a position to help them to a career, or to their advancement in a career if a selection has already been made. At the card table the older people have excellent opportunities of judging of the capabilities and characters of the younger ones.

For the young ladies bridge has its romantic side. You never know, some bridge partnership may develop into a life-long one.

NON-TREASURE ISLANDS.

By A. P. GARLAND.

STATISTICIANS say that, at a moderate estimate, there are scattered about the Spanish Main 1,734 islands, each of which is reputed to contain a buried heap of jewels, gold bars, doubloons, pieces of eight, pieces of nine, and so on. And they add that in support of this tradition there are at least 1,734 maps, each marked with a cross to show where the pirate treasure was buried.

It is not curious, then, that in spite of the scores of expeditions that have set out each year in search of these hoards, all that has been found has been a few bully-beef tins, cigarette ends, discarded socks, and the like—the debris of preceding expeditions?

No, it is not curious. It is just what we might expect. And for the simple reason that these alleged treasure-hoards do not exist. Take the case of the party, headed by three Scots, that went last year to the small island of San Jose in search of the treasure of Gory Gantry. They had a chart, properly endorsed with the skull and crossbones, without which none is genuine, and ample tools. Yet all the harvest they reaped was the fibula of a mule and hay fever. Now if treasure existed in San Jose, to suggest that three Scotsmen couldn't find their way to it is an affront to common sense. They might have to tear the island into small shreds, but get that treasure they would. The only conclusion, therefore, is that the treasure didn't exist.

Pirates and Their Loot. That really is feasible, I myself have no first-hand knowledge of pirates, but I'm sure they were not such nincompoops as to return to England home and beauty without the loot.

Fancy the bloodstained leader of a pirate crew stepping ashore at Wapping and suddenly scratching his head and bleating feebly: "Well blow me, if we haven't left the treasure behind. What a lot of plumbers we are to be sure!"

Would that get a laugh from the sweethearts and wives on the quay? Would they say, "Never mind, lads, we're glad to have you back, anyhow?" My own personal knowledge of women makes me reject this notion.

But you ask, "What about the maps? Don't they mean anything? Must not a map be considered innocent until it's proved guilty?" Well, my opinion is that these maps are all a part of one great piratical joke. A sense of humour was not lacking in our forebears who sailed under the Jolly Roger, and I can imagine how, in their idle hours, when they had polished their buttons and written to their best girls, a few of them would draw up these maps to hoodwink future generations.

"We shan't be here to see the results," they'd say to one another, "but fancy these poor noodles getting all hot and bothered about treasures that aren't there! Tenny!"

From the other side of the Styx comes faintly the hoarse crackle of Out-throat Claude and One-Eyed Aubrey. They are laughing at us.

DON'T BE A "YES"-WIFE.

By NERINA SHUTE.

IT is easier to be the good, good wife than the bad, bad wife. It requires less brain. That is the reason so many model young women sit patiently darning his socks, or mending the cushions, or reading a book about love, while George himself is "detained on business again."

The good-wife-girl is amazingly common. Everyone calls her a nice, dependable sort. And everyone (except me) says what a shame it is that George should leave her at home all the time.

Mary never complains about George. She is loyal of course. And she likes to pretend, for the sake of her pride, that his "business engagements" are bound to be more and more frequent. She tries to be gentle. She tries her hardest to do what is right. She can't understand why George is no longer attracted.

And So She Gives In.

Poor George! When Mary married she stopped using lipstick in order to please him. She gave up her outings with other young men because he was jealous. At first they had one or two quarrels about it. Then she gave in. Like most good wives she hadn't the wit to be anything else!

The man who marries a typical good-wife-girl is as much to be (Continued on Page 7.)

"I even tried to get billed with the circus, but they're not hiring anything but freaks and it would be just my luck to be born normal."

ALL CORRESPONDENCE NOW PUBLISHED.

London, Apr. 11.

The Anglo-Irish Notes relating to the Parliamentary Oath of Allegiance in the Irish Free State and to the land purchase annuities which have recently been exchanged between Mr. de Valera, of the Free State Government, and Mr. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions in the Government of the United Kingdom, were published in a White Paper to-day.

The British Note says that the issue raised by de Valera is nothing less than the repudiation of the 1921 Treaty as a whole.

ATTACK ON TREATY AS A WHOLE.

The controversy arises through the contention of the Free State Government that the Oath is not mandatory in the Anglo-Irish Treaty of 1921 and that the Free State has an absolute right to modify its Constitution in this respect, coupled with an announcement that the Free State Government claim the right, which they propose to exercise, to retain the land annuities accruing under the Irish Land Acts of 1891 to 1903. In opposition to these, the Government of the United Kingdom maintain that the Oath is an integral part of the Treaty made ten years ago between the two countries, and hitherto honourably observed on both sides, and that the Irish Free State Government are bound by the most formal and explicit undertaking to continue to pay the land annuities payments which tenants of purchased estates make in repayment of sums lent to them to buy their land.

The Real Issue.

Mr. de Valera, in a letter dated 5th April, expresses the view that whether the Oath is or is not an integral part of the Treaty made ten years ago is not now the issue. The real issue is that the Oath is now an intolerable burden and that the people of the Irish Free State desire its instant removal. The agreements of 1921, he says, gave effect to what was the will of the British Government. Britain's world prestige had been enhanced by the belief that Ireland had been set free and her national aspirations fully satisfied, whereas it had meant for Ireland a "consummation of the outrage of partition."

Examination of the Oath and removal of the articles of the Constitution necessary for that purpose, he describes as of purely domestic concern, required for the peace, order, and good government of the State.

Proposed Legislation.

The competence of the Irish Free State Legislature to pass such a measure is, he maintains, not open to question, and his Government, immediately on the reassembly of Parliament, will introduce a Bill to this effect.

Regarding the land annuities, Mr. de Valera declares himself unaware of any formal undertaking to continue this payment, but gives an assurance that his Government will scrupulously honour any just and lawful claims by Great Britain or any other creditors. His Note concludes with an expression of desire for friendly relations between Britain and the Irish Free State, based on mutual respect and common interest.

Britain's "Deep Regret".

In a reply dated Saturday, the Dominions Secretary, Mr. J. H. Thomas said the Government had read the terms of Mr. de Valera's despatch with deep regret.

The views expressed therein, says the reply, go far beyond the issues originally raised and make it clear that the questions of the Oath and the land annuities are but part of a wider issue, and that what is raised is nothing less than the repudiation of the settlement of 1921 as a whole.

"His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom entered into the 1921 settlement with a single desire that it should end the long period of bitterness between the two countries, and it is their belief that that settlement has brought a measure of peace and contentment which could not have been reached by any other means. Further, as a direct result of that settlement, the Irish Free State has participated in and contributed to notable constitutional developments of the last few years whereby the position of the Dominions, as equal members with the United Kingdom of the British Commonwealth of Nations under the Crown, has been defined and made clear to the world."

"It is true that the 1921 settlement did not result in the establishment of a United Ireland, but the Treaty itself made the necessary provision for the union of the two parts of Ireland if both had then been ready to accept it."

The Only Hope.

"As to the future, the Government in the United Kingdom felt its sufficient to state that, in their opinion, there can be no conceivable hope for the establishment of a United Ireland except on a basis that its allegiance to the Crown and its membership of the British Commonwealth will continue unimpaired."

Regarding the expressed determination to introduce a Bill into the Free State Parliament for removing the Oath from the Constitution, the reply reiterates the view of the Government of the United Kingdom that the Oath is an integral part of the Treaty settlement, and adds:

The Land Annuities.

"His Majesty's Government of the United Kingdom have publicly indicated on many occasions, in a most formal and emphatic manner, that they stand absolutely by the Treaty settlement, and to this position they most firmly adhere. "Dealing with the land annuities, the British reply, to avoid misunderstanding, places on record their origin and nature. It says: "These are not payments from Government to Government. In principle, the main transaction is not one between two Governments at all, but between the Irish tenant purchaser and the holder of land stock, which is, of course, held both in Great Britain and in the Irish Free State. The position is that the annuities are collected by the Irish Free State Government from the tenant purchasers and are distributed through the National Debt Commissioners to holders of the stock."

"The Irish land annuities are, therefore, in effect, payments on the instalment system by the Irish tenant, for land which he has bought, which pass through the hands both of the Irish Free State Finance Ministry and of the National Debt Commissioners, and are ultimately received by the holder of Irish Land Stock."

"Binding in Law and Order." The reply proceeds to cite the text of the formal and explicit undertakings governing land annuities payment, contained in the financial agreement by the British and Irish Free State Governments on 12th February, 1922, and confirmed in the "heads of the ultimate financial settlement" between the two Governments, signed on behalf of both on 19th March, 1926, and discussed in the Free State Parliament some months later.

The British Government, says the reply, regard these undertakings and their character as "binding in law and honour on the Irish Free State, whatever administration may be in power, in exactly the same way as the Treaty itself is binding on both countries."

"The reply concludes with an expression of desire for continued friendly relations, adding that in the British Government's view "these relations cannot but be impaired by any failure in complete fulfilment of obligations deliberately undertaken."

Debate Likely.

When questioned in Parliament regarding the correspondence to-day, Mr. Thomas confined himself to saying that in their reply to the de Valera Government, they had "reaffirmed in unmistakable language that they stood absolutely by the Treaty settlement."

PEAK MOTORING INCIDENT.

FRENCH OWNER IN COURT.

As a sequel to a motor accident on Stubbs Road, near Jardines' Corner, recently, Mr. P. G. Meunier, of the Charbonnages du Tonkin, was summoned before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning by Sub-Inspector W. R. Chester Woods for driving his motor car on the wrong side of the road and for negligent driving.

Mr. E. S. C. Brooks appeared on behalf of the defendant, while Mr. O. E. C. Marton represented the chauffeur in the employ of Mr. H. R. B. Hancock, whose car was also involved in the mishap.

Mr. Brooks said he pleaded guilty to the summons for driving on the wrong side of the road but denied the other.

Explaining the circumstances of the first summons, Mr. Brooks said the accident took place at 2 a.m. in the morning—a Sunday morning. The defendant was driving his car up Stubbs Road and the accident actually took place just before Jardines' Corner, near the Peak Church, where there is a big bend in the road. The defendant was driving a two-seater car and there were three people in it, all sitting in the front seat. The other car, belonging to Mr. Hancock, was travelling down the hill and was being driven by the chauffeur, with nobody else in it. Mr. Hancock's chauffeur, in order to pass the car in front of the defendant, dimmed his lights with the result that the defendant had no indication that another car was approaching from the opposite direction.

Other Points.

Another point, said Mr. Brooks, was that the white lines on that particular bend were not very clear, as they had not been recently painted. The result was that the defendant drove his car on the right hand side of the road, not being aware that another car was going down. A further point was that the car which his client was driving was of American manufacture, and he understood these particular cars were rather high off the road and were more manageable if the driver did not take a corner too wide—that was, the car should keep to the centre as much as possible.

In reply to his Worship, Mr. Brooks said the corner was a right hand bend and the car had a left hand drive.

Continuing, Mr. Brooks said it was easier to keep more in the middle of the road rather than take the corner wide on the outside. His client did that, with the result that when measurements were taken it was seen that the right hand wheel of the car was over the centre of the road.

A further point, continued Mr. Brooks, and perhaps a smaller one, was that when Mr. Hancock's car was going down the hill, and after passing the car in front of the defendant's car, the chauffeur suddenly switched on the lights, which he was entitled to do, with the result that the defendant was blinded by the lights, and this added to his difficulties.

The defendant, proceeded Mr. Brooks, had been driving a car for twelve years in France and previous to coming to the Colony had been in India, where he had driven a car for two and a half years. He had driven in Hongkong for one month, but during the whole of his experience he had not had a complaint made against him.

Under the circumstances, Mr. Brooks asked his Worship to deal as leniently as possible with the case.

At this stage, Mr. Marton intimated that he was appearing for Mr. Hancock's chauffeur but he understood that there were no allegations against him.

No Great Speed.

Mr. Brooks remarked that he could call evidence on the question of speed. The defendant and Capt. and Mrs. A. B. Smeathers, who were in the car, would say that the speed was not more than 20 miles an hour.

His Worship asked Inspector Chester Woods whether he accepted the statement made by Mr. Brooks as regards speed.

Inspector Chester Woods said the corner was a dangerous one, and a blind one for anybody going up. The defendant's car was four and a half feet over the white line.

Mr. Brooks interposed and said he was afraid he had to dispute that. Measurements were taken after the accident and he had been instructed to say that it was no more than one and three quarters feet over the white line.

His Worship:—Apart from that, do the police consider there was dangerous driving?

"Homo's" Latest Reply.

[To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.]

Sir,—I feel very grateful to "Pussy" for her sympathetic interest and deep regret all the heart-breaking misunderstandings of which I appear to have been found guilty.

To Mr. K. B. Vaidya, I must apologise for unintentional mutilation. A friend had taken my copy of the Telegraph when I committed the crime, and I am uncertain as to whether imperfection of observation, retention or recollection was responsible—but, anyhow, "what is there in a name?"

One frequently hears the expression "from the sublime to the ridiculous." Mr. Vaidya, from the sublime, has definitely crashed to the sordid. I suggested in my reply to him that he was in danger of attaining too high an altitude by the introduction of philosophy into the discussion, and now feel impelled to protest just as strongly against the introduction of smelly drains. Not that I am prejudiced, in any way, against well-constructed drains. They are of infinitely more use to humanity than we newspaper correspondents. Mr. Vaidya appears to have acquired a somewhat distorted outlook from both drains and their inspectors. But for the drain-inspectors, we should probably all have died from plague or mumps centuries ago, and as for their "smelling nothing but dust and drains everywhere, even the most refined and pleasant spots appearing to them only as drains," one might, with equal assurance, claim that to a chimney-sweep everybody must be black, that an electrician necessarily disbelieved in darkness, that a doctor, when declaring his patient cured, is secretly convinced that the said patient's hopeless condition precludes the very idea of him being alive, or that to a pork butcher the streets are swarming with pigs joy-riding in automobiles.

The fallacy in Mr. Vaidya's analogy seems fairly obvious. A jaundiced-eyed man is the victim of a disease which influences his outlook on life, whereas the drain-inspector is a man, physically and mentally normal, who is engaged upon the prevention and elimination of such diseases. He does not, moreover, require the advice of a specialist in philosophy or psychology in the performance of his duties.

I regret the necessity for this discussion. Perhaps as a result of it, Mr. Vaidya will have managed to retrace his steps to mid-level before the end of the week. His concluding paragraph was the one bright spot in the column. The line I gave, "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," has, I admit, always appeared somewhat abstract.

What is there in the name, That which you call rose? Call it by some other name, It will smell as sweet.

Mr. Vaidya's amended version clarifies our ideas considerably, and yet the necessity for a measure of concentration still arises. "If we look to the inner meaning of the first line, it tells us that there is nothing in the name of a thing, but that we must look to its effect." Our friend hereby definitely eradicates all possible ambiguity—never bet on a horse, girls, till you see it win the race. Yours, etc., HOMO.

Macao Explosion.

Sir,—I read Mr. de Gray's letter on the Macao explosion in your issue of April 9, with interest.

I think it will come somewhat of a surprise to many of your readers to know that the people (sufferers) living in Flora (Avenida Sidonio Pais) in the vicinity of the disaster, had losses amounting to more than $400,000 (Hongkong currency). Not even a single cent was refunded by the Macao Government.

I hope that the Macao Government will take steps in the interests and right of the public generally.—Yours, etc., COSTA.

Stationed at the Police Training School for only two months, Chan Chee-wah, Constable C380, was charged before Mr. Fraser, at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning, with theft of some clothing from a house at No. 2 Wooning Street. Additional charges were of receiving stolen property, giving a false name when pawing the clothing and with misconduct as a police officer. Mr. L. Catropp, A.S.P., who prosecuted, stated that defendant went to the house on Saturday evening and when he left the next morning, the inmates found some clothing missing. A report was made to the police, who subsequently traced the stolen property to a workshop in Shamshuipo. After evidence was taken, the case was remanded until Friday afternoon.

His Worship intimated that he would have to take the evidence on the negligent driving summons, and adjourned both until Saturday morning.

pitied as she is herself. It is hard to explain that the things which attract him in women are the very crimes he must try to suppress. There are one or two women who firmly refuse to be fools about men. They make up their minds, even before they get married, to try to belong to the bad wife school.

It is rather a struggle they find. There are plenty of quarrels. The neighbours start talking. But a bad-wife-girl is prepared to be misunderstood. The truth of it is that men are collectors. A good bad wife is hard to obtain. A bad good wife can be had for a song!

Women take pleasure in giving in to the people they love. They want to give in. And when they find that George is "detained on business again" they try to please him by waiting at home. They please him all right. That's the reason he suddenly gets rather "keen on his work."

I am not suggesting that men fall in love with women who "fool them." Only with women who "kid them along." I am sorry for men whose wives go to pieces once they get married—the Marys of "Yes, dear," unions, who stop using make-up, and dress like their mothers, in order to do what is right.

The greatest mistake that a young girl can make is to give her husband no trouble at all. It makes him unhappy, that's why. He likes to be worried. He loves to feel that unless he gets home on time she might easily go out with somebody else.

"A 'Yes, dear,' a day keeps the husband away!"

DOMINANT
RUMJAHN.WINS TENNIS TITLE COMFORTABLY.

FINCHER USELESS.

Employing his entire repertoire of strokes, knowledge of court craft and subtlety in tactics, S. A. Rumjahn yesterday outplayed E. C. Fincher in the final of the open singles tennis championship to win the title in four sets, the scores reading 6-2, 6-1, 1-6, 6-4.

Fincher, but a shadow of his normal self, could do nothing to withstand the splendidly directed attack of the Indian, and in conceding the first two sets, lost all chances of achieving an ambition which has eluded him for the past three years.

Rumjahn's stroke work was the best he has produced this year. He drove magnificently on both hands deeply to all corners of the court, keeping Fincher strictly on the defensive for three-fourths of the game, and following up his ground shots with accurate overhead smashes and well-directed volleys. He completely routed Fincher's endeavours to force the exchanges from the net by means of some perfect lobbing which sent the Kowloon player to the baseline, or leaving him entirely out of position.

Fincher, defeated on tactics, almost lost his head, and committed many blunders. Even his chop and slice strokes went to pieces and failed to remain an effective defensive weapon.

He occasionally pulled out a nice looking passing shot in the third set, when Rumjahn was rash enough to go up to the net on a straightforward return, but he could not compare with the Indian in the other phases of the game, his lobbing in particular being short and offering easy points. Often when he had secured a promising position at the net, he failed to make the best of it, by returning the ball straight to Rumjahn, who waited for the opportune moment to lob over Fincher's head.

Rumjahn was twice as fast about the court, while the agile and decisive manner in which he dealt with anything within his reach overhead, spell success. He won the first two sets by means some very fine all-court play. His driving earned him a number of points, and Fincher's impotency in returning the ball contributed to a great extent to his success.

Fincher was seen at his best, which even then was below par, in the third set, but the effort came too late. Rumjahn reserving his vitality to the fourth set when he administered the Coup de grace without any apparent effort, taking the match game to love on his own service.

Rumjahn, who was a worthy winner, now has his name engraved on the cup for the second time. He previously won the title as far back as 1927, and has made several appearances in the final. Yesterday was Fincher's third consecutive final, and he played no better than he did against C.A.L. Rumjahn last year, when he was completely outwitted.

Yesterday's results and to-day's programme are appended:
Open Singles Final.
S. A. Rumjahn beat E. C. Fincher, 6-2, 6-1, 1-6, 6-4.

OVER 600 RELIEFS FOR CHINA SQUADRON.

H.M.S. Vindictive, after being held up outside the harbour since 8 a.m. on Sunday by dense fogs, arrived at Hongkong yesterday morning, with reliefs for H.M.S. Medway and the submarine flotilla. The Vindictive moored alongside H.M.S. Medway, at No. 2 buoy at 9 a.m., and the disembarkation of the relief ratings for the submarine flotilla took place in the afternoon. A total of 120 officers and men were disembarked for the submarine flotilla, while 45 officers and men transferred to H.M.S. Tamar.

On Wednesday 300 officers and ratings will be exchanged with those aboard H.M.S. Medway who are to proceed home by the Vindictive, and half crews will be transferred to H.M.S. Cleland and H.M.S. Tarantula. Forty-five Royal Marines and a few casual reliefs will complete the total of 680 officers and men who are to disembark.

The Vindictive only has a skeleton crew, and during the trip from Portsmouth was worked by the ratings who disembarked here. Similarly she will be worked, on the return trip, by those who are proceeding home. After disembarking the crew for the Medway, the Vindictive will move alongside the naval docks, where a large quantity of naval stores will be discharged. She will leave Hongkong on the return trip to Portsmouth on April 21.

The Vindictive is under the command of Captain E. McC. W. Lawrie, D.S.O. She left Portsmouth on February 16, and disembarked a new crew for H.M.S. Triad, Senior Officers ship in the Persian Gulf, at Colombo.

Among the ratings who returned to Hongkong by the Vindictive for another period of service in the China squadron was Harry Ewin, the well-known service boxer, who was middleweight champion of the Colony during his last stay here.

THE LATE MR. M. MANUK.

This Society is the organization for which he cared most, and to which he has dedicated his heart and soul. He has worked here as long as he could work and sacrificed his physical body for the advancement of spiritual knowledge. He himself has risen to the still higher plane from where he is still helping and inspiring us.

I think the surest place where his soul can live and advance is the hearts of those who loved it and the minds of those which were impressed by it.

We owe him a greatest debt of gratitude. Let us do our best to continue the good work which he has started and entrusted to us (and pay off as much of the debt of gratitude that we owe to him as possible) by trying to fulfill his hope. He has helped us to understand ourselves and our brethren, to know and understand those greatest masters, so that by following their footsteps we may advance and approach the greatest master, our Spiritual Father.

May the Almighty protect his soul and keep him in his loving arms, with perfect peace and bliss.

Other Speakers.

Mr. Wei Tat, the president of the Chinese Lodge, also paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the late Mr. Manuk, in the course of which he said:

Friends, Brother Manuk has gone. He has gone in the plenitude of his powers, in the noonday of his popularity. But we know he is here with us to-night. He is living in every one of us and in every one of the beautiful flowers around us. I am now vividly conscious of his life and his love permeating every atom of my being, and I know he will live with us from eternity to eternity. But like Brother Russell we cannot help asking why it is that he was so suddenly called away at a time when we still need his guiding hand and his enlightening influence. Why is the perfect flower of humanity snatched away before its full blossoming, before the full expression of its fragrance?

Perhaps I may bring you the consolation that Bro. Manuk, as the messenger of the Great Ones, as one of the Company of Servers, belonged to the time being he was sent here. Members of the Lord's Staff may be sent anywhere, to function on any plane, to serve in any world. As the Lord's messenger, he came forth to us, returning to Him as soon as the message has been delivered, be the delivery of it a piece of work, or an intimation of His will. He may only sow the seed, or carry the seeds to the sower, and has no concern with the greater harvest. He may go elsewhere long before the fields in which he has sown are ready for the reapers.

In this connexion, I can sincerely assure Bro. Manuk that the harvest which he has prepared in China will be a rich one, extending throughout the length and breadth of the Republic, because there is at least one soul who loves him so much and is so grateful to him that he has taken upon himself the mission of disseminating the Light and Truth which he has brought to us, and which will unite all our classes, religions, vocations and political parties into one human national brotherhood, fulfilling its special duty towards mankind, and contributing to its enrichment, its greatness and its beauty.

Work to Continue.

Dr. Ludwig Reichelt was the last to extend his appreciation of the memory of a good and just man, recalling his early association with the late leader and the latter's enthusiastic interest in

SCRAPPERS CLAIM U.S.S. HELENA.

OLD AMERICAN WARSHIP LEAVES THIS WEEK.

After thirty years' service in the China Sea, the old United States gunboat Helena, which is perhaps better known in shipping and naval circles than any other vessel in the East, is to be sent to Cavite, Philippine Islands, to be scrapped. The Helena was launched in January 1893, and after being commissioned in 1897, was sent for patrol duty on the Amazon River, in South America. She arrived at the China Station in 1902 and performed duty along the China coast and Yangtze River until 1917, when she was ordered to duty around Vladivostok and the Russian Islands, where she stayed until 1922. The Helena returned to South China waters, and was on patrol duty at Canton until 1927, when she was ordered to the Yangtze River, remaining there for two years. She was transferred back to Canton and Hongkong in 1929 and has been here since, staying most of the time at Canton.

In the old days the Helena was referred to rather unkindly as the "Jam Factory," on account of her unusually high funnel, which was, of course, constructed specially for the Amazon River patrol. The funnel was later shortened to its present height. The Helena is a sister ship to the U.S.S. Wilmington, which was also stationed in Far Eastern waters until 1922. The Wilmington is now being used on the Great Lakes as a training ship, and thus escapes the sad fate that is in store for the Helena.

The dimensions of the Helena are—Length 261 feet, draft 9 feet, twin-screwed, speed 15½ knots. Her armaments consist of 8 four-inch 40 cal. guns and four three-pounders 12.80 cal.

The Helena came out of dock at Taikoo yesterday, and will leave Hongkong for Cavite on Friday. Owing to her age, and the risk of proceeding to open sea, the Helena will be escorted to Cavite by the U.S.S. Pecos, which came here specially last week to act as escort. After her arrival at Cavite the Helena will be de-commissioned and will be broken up.

Two of the best remembered former commanders of the Helena in South China waters are Admiral Thos. R. Washington, and Captain John M. Enoch. Admiral Washington, who was one of the earliest commanders of the Helena, retired from active service in 1923.

the sphere of work he had assumed. Those present stood in a reverential silence while the benevolent spirit of the late leader was invoked for the work of the Society, which, it was announced, would be continued without interruption, meeting every Thursday evening as heretofore.

As soon as that could be managed, the official title of the organization would be changed to the Manuk Lodge of the Theosophical Society, in fitting commemoration of the work of a great teacher.

NOTED AMERICAN VISITOR.

MAJOR-GENERAL HINES IN HONGKONG.

Among the passengers by the Dollar liner President Hoover, which arrived yesterday morning from Manila, was Major-General J. L. Hines, retiring commander of the U. S. military forces in the Philippine Islands. General Hines will report to the War Department in Washington before his actual retirement from active service.

Although 64 years of age, General Hines is a commanding figure. Well over six feet, he is lean and wiry. One would describe him as the "rawbone" type. During his West Point cadet days he was a football player, and it is said that he played in the first football team that famous academy ever had. His chief hobby now is riding, and at Manila he rode every morning before going to his headquarters, and on Sundays took his staff officers for long, cross-country rides.

Major-General Hines was born on May 21, 1868, at White Sulphur Springs, Virginia. He graduated from West Point in 1891, and was commissioned a lieutenant in the Second Infantry of the Regular Army. It is interesting to note that among the campaigns he served in was the Philippine Insurrection of 1901, when he fought against the Filipinos. He served in the Santiago campaign and was Adjutant General of a punitive expedition into Mexico in pursuit of the famous Villa.

General Hines sailed for France when America entered the Great War, and served as Assistant Adjutant General of the American Expeditionary Forces. He was rapidly promoted until, in August, 1918, he was made a Major General and assigned to the command of the Fourth Division. Over forty years of General Hines' life has been spent in the U. S. Army.

During their stay in Hongkong, General and Mrs. Hines will be the guests of H. E. Major-General J. W. Sandilands, G.O.C. the British Troops in China.

LUTHER'S ESCAPE.

ATTACK A GESTURE OF PROTEST.

Berlin, Apr. 11.
Dr. Luther, the former Chancellor of Germany, who was shot at as he was enroute for Basel yesterday, is apparently little the worse for his experience.

Immediately upon arrival at Basel, where he is to represent Germany at the financial conference, he went to a doctor and had his wound bandaged.

AIR ROUTE TO AMERICA.

London, Apr. 11. An Arctic Expedition, organised with the object of discovering the shortest air route from Europe to America, via Franz Josef Land and the North Pole, is to be undertaken by Professor Samoilovitch, the famous Russian explorer. He is planning to use the Soviet ice-breaker Krassin for the expedition, while he will also be taking aeroplanes. Professor Samoilovitch expressed the hope that 1933 will see the arrival in Alaska of the first Russian airship built on General Noble's system. It will be recalled that it was Professor Samoilovitch who effected the dramatic rescue of the crew of the ill-fated Italian airship "Italia." He used the Krassin for the rescue work.—Reuter.

DISARMAMENT PLEAS.

RESUMPTION OF THE CONFERENCE

Geneva, Apr. 11. At the meeting to-day of the Disarmament Conference, Mr. Hugh Gibson (United States) intimated that he would be prepared later to advocate the abolition of bombing planes. Sir John Simon warmly supported the American proposal. Dr. Nadjolny (Germany) urged a reduction of armaments to the lowest limit compatible with national security. M. Tardieu sympathised with Mr. Gibson's ideas, but said he considered that the French proposals went further than Mr. Gibson's which applied solely to land weapons and was therefore contrary to the French argument regarding the interdependence of armaments.—Reuter.

B. & S. APPEAL

London, Apr. 11. The Court of Appeal to-day upheld the judgment of Mr. Justice Rowlatt in the King's Bench Division dismissing the action of the China Navigation Company against the Attorney-General concerning the British Government's right to demand payment for the provision of anti-piracy guards to British ships in Chinese waters. The China Navigation Company contended that the expense of guarding British ships with naval and military forces was covered by House of Commons Votes, to which they contributed as taxpayers. Their counsel argued that the Crown was not empowered to claim payment. The Court of Appeal found otherwise.—Reuter.

KENYA LAND PROBLEMS.

A COMMISSION OF INQUIRY.

London, Apr. 11. The Secretary for the Colonies has appointed Sir William Carter, late Chief Justice of Tanganyika, to be Chairman of the Commission of Inquiry into land questions in Kenya. Other members are Captain Frank Wilson, of Kenya, and Mr. Rupert Hemsted, late Senior Commissioner in the Kenya Government service, with Mr. S. H. Fazan, of the Kenya Administrative service, as Secretary. The Commission are asked to consider inter alia the needs of the native population, present and prospective, with respect to land, and the desirability and practicability of settling aside further areas for present or future occupancy of communities or individuals of recognized tribes and of detribalised natives. Among other duties is that of defining the area known as the Highlands, within which persons of European descent are to have a privileged position.—British Wire- less.

have arranged to confer in London shortly with the object of cutting out wasteful competition.

One proposal to be submitted to the conference is that each Company shall lay up at least one of its large vessels, but that such liners as the Aquitania, the Majestic, the Bremen and the Ile de France shall not be put out of commission.

UNACKNOWLEDGED FRENCH SUBJECT.

REVELATIONS IN PASSPORT CASE.

A query as to the defendant's nationality was raised when George Arthur de Houx de Fastree was brought up on remand before Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Central Police Court to-day, charged with possession of an automatic and with entering the Colony without a proper passport.

Through Mr. Leo D'Almada, Jnr., he pleaded not guilty to both charges.

At a previous appearance, de Fastree had pleaded that the automatic was practically useless, owing to defective mechanism, and that he had a certificate of identity with a British visa.

Captain Guy R. Bass, Secretary and Chief Police Officer of Kulong Municipal Council, administering the International Settlement of Kulong, Amoy, was called as a witness by the police. He said he knew de Fastree as George Houx for about four-and-a-half years. During Houx's time at Amoy, Houx applied for a visa to come to Hongkong, this being about the 13th or 14th October of last year.

Describing what happened when Houx made the application for the visa, witness said he was sitting in the office of H.M. Consul (Mr. Grant Jones) when a card was brought in bearing the name of George Houx. Witness withdrew from the office into the verandah, and when Houx came into the room he overheard Houx ask for a visa to come to Hongkong. The Consul asked the man's nationality, and Houx replied:—"I am an unacknowledged French subject."

Cross-examined by Mr. Leo d'Almada, witness admitted it was quite possible that Houx did not know he was on the verandah, or that he had seen him.

Witness, answering another question, said it was his intention that he should not be observed by Houx.

Mr. D'Almada:—You did not think it your duty to sit in the room? Witness:—No. The Consul, continued witness, refused the application and told Houx to see the French Consul. From his previous conversations with Houx, witness came to the conclusion that Houx was born in France, had evaded military duty and was consequently disowned. The case was adjourned until Thursday afternoon.

A prisoner who was convicted of robbery in Weihaiwei and sentenced to penal servitude in Hongkong, died from tuberculosis at Victoria Gaol last night. This morning Mr. Schofield, with a jury composed of Messrs. J. R. Way (foreman), H. Davenport Browne and J. A. da Costa Ribeiro, conducted the usual enquiry, a verdict of death from natural causes being returned. The deceased was convicted in February and admitted to the Gaol in March, 1929.
